

U. SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

AA0011884012

807.42

C7351

AUTHOR

Conic English grammar

TITLE

6545

DATE

807.42

C7351

Conic English
grammar

6545

THIS BOOK MUST BE KEPT IN STUDIO DURING WORKING HOURS AVAILABLE FOR CALL.

P-618

M H 157

LIBRARY
VOLUME 1

THE COMIC

ENGLISH GRAMMAR:

A NEW AND FACETIOUS

INTRODUCTION TO THE ENGLISH TONGUE.

EMBELLISHED WITH UPWARDS OF FORTY-FIVE CHARACTERISTIC ILLUSTRATIONS, BY J. LEECH.

917.1
1551

acc.
6545

NEW YORK:

DICK & FITZGERALD, PUBLISHERS

16 ANN STREET.

PRELIMINARY DISCOURSE.

FASHION requires, and like the rest of her sex, requires because she requires, that before a writer begins the business of his book, he should give an account to the world of his reasons for producing it; and therefore, to avoid singularity, we shall proceed with the statement of our own, excepting only a few private ones, which are neither here nor there.

To advance the interests of mankind by promoting the cause of Education; to ameliorate the conversation of the masses; to cultivate Taste, and diffuse Refinement; these are the objects we have in view in submitting a Comic English Grammar to the patronage of a discerning Public.

Few persons there are, whose ears are so extremely obtuse, as not to be frequently annoyed at the violations of Grammar by which they are so often assailed. It is really painful to be forced, in walking along the streets, to hear such phrases as, "That 'ere omnibus." "Where've you bin?" "Vot's the odds?" and the like. Very dreadful expressions are also used by cartmen and others in addressing their horses. What can possibly induce a human being to say "Gee woot!" "'Mather way!" or "Woa?" not to mention the atrocious "Kim aup!" of the barbarous butcher's boy.

It is notorious that the above and greater enormities are perpetrated in spite of the number of Grammars already before the world. This fact sufficiently excuses the present addition to the stock; and as serious English Grammars have hitherto failed to effect the desired reformation, we are induced to attempt it by means of a Comic one.

With regard to the moral tendency of our labors, we may be here permitted to remark, that they will tend, if successful, to the suppression of evil speaking; and as the Spartans used to exhibit a tipsy slave to their children with a view to disgust them with drunkenness, so we, by giving a few examples here and there, of incorrect phraseology, shall expose, in their naked deformity, the vices of speech to the ingenious reader.

The comical mind, like the jaundiced eye, views everything through a colored medium. Such a mind is that of the generality of our countrymen. We distinguish even the nearest ties of relationship by facetious names. A father is called "dad," or "poppa;" an uncle, "nunkey;" and a wife, a "rib," or more pleasantly still, as in the advertisements for situations, "an encumbrance."

We will not allow a man to give an old woman a dose of rhubarb if he have not acquired at least half a dozen sciences; but we permit a quack to sell as much poison as he pleases. When one man runs away with another's wife, and, being on that account challenged to fight a duel, shoots the aggrieved party through the head, the latter is said to receive satisfaction.

We never take a glass of wine at dinner without getting somebody else to do the same, as if we wanted encouragement; and then, before we venture to drink, we bow to each other across the table, preserving all the while a most wonderful gravity. This, however, it may be said, is the natural result of endeavoring to keep one another in countenance.

The way in which we imitate foreign manners and customs is very amusing. Savages stick fish-bones through their noses; our fair countrywomen have hoops of metal poked through their ears. The Caribs flatten the forehead; the Chinese compress the foot; and we possess similar contrivances for reducing the figure of a young lady to a resemblance to an hour-glass or a devil-on-two-sticks.

There being no other assignable motive for these and the like proceedings, it is reasonable to suppose that they are adopted, as schoolboys say, "for fun."

We could go on, were it necessary, adducing facts to an almost unlimited extent; but we consider that enough has now been said in proof of the comic character of the national mind. And in conclusion, if any other than an English or American author can be produced, equal in point of wit, humor, and drollery, to Swift, Sterne, Dickens, or Paulding, we hereby engage to eat him; albeit we have no pretensions to the character of a "helluo librorum."

THE COMIC ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

“ENGLISH GRAMMAR,” according to Lindley Murray, “is the art of speaking and writing the English language with propriety.”

The English language, written and spoken with propriety, is commonly called the King’s English.

A monarch, who, three or four generations back, occupied the English throne, is reported to have said, “If beebles will be ‘boets, they must sdarve.” This was a rather curious specimen of “King’s English.” It is, however, a maxim of English law, that “the King can do no wrong.” Whatever bad English, therefore, may proceed from the royal mouth, is not “King’s English,” but “Minister’s English,” for which they alone are responsible.

King’s English (or perhaps, under existing circumstances it should be called, Queen’s English) is the current coin of conversation, to mutilate which, and unlawfully to utter the same, is called clipping the King’s English; a high crime and misdemeanor.

Clipped English, or bad English, is one variety of Comic English, of which we shall adduce instances hereafter.

Slipslop, or the erroneous substitution of one word for another, as “prodigy” for “protegee,” “derange.

He's only a little “prodigy” of mine, Doctor.

ment” for “arrangement,” “exasperate” for “aspirate,” and the like, is another.

Slang, which consists in cant words and phrases, as “dodge” for “sly trick,” “no go” for “failure,” and “carney” “to flatter,” may be considered a third.

Latinised English, or Fine English, sometimes assumes the character of Comic English, especially when applied to the purposes of common discourse ; as "Extinguish the luminary," "Agitate the communicator," "Are your corporeal functions in a condition of salubrity?" "A sable visual orb," "A sanguinary nasal protuberance."

American English is Comic English in a "pretty particular considerable tarnation" degree.

English Grammar is divided into four parts—Orthography, Etymology, Syntax, and Prosody; and as these are points that a good grammarian always stands upon, he, particularly when a pedant, and consequently somewhat flat, may very properly be compared to a table.

PART I.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

CHAPTER I.

OF THE NATURE OF THE LETTERS, AND OF A COMIC ALPHABET.

ORTHOGRAPHY is like a schoolmaster, or instructor of youth. It teaches us the nature and powers of letters and the right method of spelling words.

Comic Orthography teaches us the oddity and absurdities of letters, and the wrong method of spelling words. The following is an example of Comic Orthography:—

my Deer jemes islington foteenth of february 1844.

wen fust i sawed yu doun the middle and up agin att the bawl i maid Up my Mind to skure you for my oan for i Felt at once that my appiness was at Steak, and a sensashun in my Bussum I coudent no ways accompt For. And i said to mary at missis Igginses said i theres the Mann for my money o ses Shee i nose a Sweeter Yung Man than that Air Do you sez i Agin then there we Agree To Differ, and we was sittin by the window and we was wery Neer fallin Out. my deer gemes Sins that Nite i Havent slept a Wink and Wot is moor to the Porpus i Have quit Lost my Happy tight and am gettin wus and wus witch i Think yu ort to pitty Mee. i am Tolled every Day that ime Gettin Thinner and a Jipsy sed that nothin wood Cure me
 But a Ring.

i was a Long time makin my Mind Up to right to You for of Coarse i Says jemes will think me too forrad but this bein Leep yere i thout ide Make a Plunge, leastways to all Them as dont Want to Bee old Makes all their blessed lives. so my Deer Jemes if yow want a Pardoner for Better or for wus nows Your Time dont think i Behave despicable for tis my Luv for yu as makes Me take this Stepp.

please to Burn this Letter when Red and excuse the scralls and Blotches witch is Caused by my Teers i remain

till deth Yure on Happy Vallentine

jane you No who.

poscrip

nex sunday Is my sunday out And i shall be Att the corner of Wite Street at a quawter pas Sevn.

Wen This U. C. remember Mee
j. g.

Now, to proceed with Orthography, we may remark, that a letter is the least part of a word.

Of a comic letter an instance has already been given. Dr. Johnson's letter to Lord Chesterfield is a capital letter.

The letters of the Alphabet are the representatives of articulate sounds.

The Alphabet is a Republic of Letters.

There are many things in this world erroneously as well as vulgarly compared to “bricks.” In the case of the letters of the Alphabet, however, the comparison is just; they constitute the fabric of a language, and grammar is the mortar. The wonder is that there should be so few of them. The English letters are twenty-six in number. There is nothing like beginning at the beginning; and we shall now therefore enumerate them, with the view also of rendering their insertion subsidiary to mythological instruction, in conformity with the plan on which some account of the Heathen Deities and ancient heroes is prefixed or subjoined to a Dictionary. We present the reader with a form of Alphabet composed in humble imitation of that famous one, which, while appreciable by the dullest taste, and level to the meanest capacity, is nevertheless that by which the greatest minds have been agreeably inducted into knowledge.

THE ALPHABET.

A was Apollo, the god of the carol,
B stood for Bacchus, astride on his barrel;
C for good Ceres, the goddess of grist,
D was Diana, that wouldn't be kiss'd;
E was nymph Echo, that pined to a sound,
F was sweet Flora, with buttercups crown'd;
G was Jove's pot-bôÿ, young Ganymede hight,
H was fair Hebe, his barmaid so tight;
I, little Io, turn'd into a cow,
J, jealous Juno, that spiteful old sow;
K was Kitty, more lovely than goddess or muse,
L, Laccoon—I wouldn't have been in his shoes!

M was blue-eyed Minerva, with stockings to match,
N was Nestor, with grey beard and silvery thatch ;
O was lofty Olympus, King Jupiter's shop,
P, Parnassus, Apollo hung out on its top ;
Q stood for Quirites, the Romans, to wit ;
R, for rantipole Roscius, that made such a hit ;
S, for Sappho, so famous for felo-de-se,
T, for Thales the wise, F. R. S. and M. D :
U was crafty Ulysses, so artful a dodger,
V was hop-a-kick Vulcan, that limping old codger ;
Wenus—Venus I mean—with a W begins,
(Vell, if I ham a Cockney, wot need of your grins ?)
X was Xantippe, the scratch-cat and shrew,
Y, I don't know what Y was, whack me if I do !
Z was Zeno the Stoic, Zenobia the clever,
 And Zoilus the critic, whose fame lasts forever.

Letters are divided into Vowels and Consonants. The vowels are capable of being perfectly uttered by themselves. They are, as it were, independent members of the Alphabet, and like independent members elsewhere, form a small minority. The vowels are a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y.

An I. O. U. is a more pleasant thing to have, than it is to give.

A blow in the stomach is very likely to W up.

W is a consonant when it begins a word, as "Wicked Will Wiggins whacked his wife with a whip ;" but in every other place it is a vowel, as crawling, drawling, sawney, screwing, Jew. Y follows the same rule.

A consonant is an articulate sound ; but, like an old bachelor, if it exists alone, it exists to no purpose.

It cannot be perfectly uttered without the aid of a vowel; and even then the vowel has the greatest share in the production of the sound. Thus a vowel joined to a consonant becomes, so to speak, a "better half:" or at all events very strongly resembles one.

A diphthong is the union of two vowels in one sound, as ea in heavy, eu in Meux, ou in stout.

A triphthong is a similar union of three vowels, as eau in the word beau; a term applied to dandies, and addressed to geese: probably because they are birds of a feather.

A proper diphthong is that in which the sound is formed by both the vowels: as, aw in awkward, ou in lout.

An improper diphthong is that in which the sound is formed by one of the vowels only, as ea in heartless. oa in hoax.

According to our notions there are a great many improper diphthongs in common use. By improper diphthongs we mean vowels unwarrantably dilated into diphthongs, and diphthongs mispronounced, in defiance of good English.

For instance, the rustics and dandies say,—

“Loor! whaut a foine gaal! Moy oy!”

“Whaut a precious soight of crows!”

“As I was a comin’ whoam through the corn fiddles (fields) I met Willum Jones.”

“I sor (saw) him.”

“Dror (draw) it out.”

“Hold your jor (jaw).”

“I caun’t. You shaun’t. How’s your Maw and Paw? Do you like taut (tart)?”

We have heard young ladies remark,—

“Oh, my! What a naice young man!”

“What a bee—eautiful day!”

“I’m so fond of dayncing!”

Again, dandies frequently exclaim,—

“I’m postively tiawed (tired).”

“What a sweet tempaw! (temper).”

“How daughty (dirty) the streets au!”

And they also call,—

Literature, “literetchah.”

Perfectly, “pawfacly.”

Disgusted, “disgasted.”

Sky, “ske—eye.”

Blue, “ble—ew.”

We might here insert a few remarks on the nature of the human voice, and of the mechanism by means of which articulation is performed; but besides our dislike to prolixity, we are afraid of getting down in the mouth, and thereby going the wrong way to please our readers. We may nevertheless venture to invite attention to a few comical peculiarities in connection with articulate sounds.

Ahem! at the commencement of a speech, is a sound agreeably droll.

The vocal comicalities of the infant in arms are exceedingly laughable, but we are unfortunately unable to spell them.

The articulation of the Jew is peculiarly ridiculous. The "peoplesh" are badly spoken of, and not well spoken.

Bawling, croaking, hissing, whistling, and grunting, are elegant vocal accomplishments.

Lisping, as, thweet, Dthooliur, thawming, kweechau, is by some considered interesting, by others absurd.

But of all the sounds which proceed from the human mouth, by far the funniest are Ha! ha! ha!—Ho! ho! ho! and He! he! he!

CHAPTER II.

OF SYLLABLES.

SYLLABLE is a nice word, it sounds so much like syllabub!

A syllable, whether it constitute a word or part of a word, is a sound, either simple or compound, produced by one effort of the voice, as, "O!, what, a, lark!
—Here, we, are!"

Spelling is the art of putting together the letters which compose a syllable, or the syllables which compose a word.

Comic spelling is usually the work of imagination.

The chief rule to be observed in this kind of spelling, is, to spell every word as it is pronounced ; though the rule is not universally observed by comic spellers. The following example, for the genuineness of which we can vouch, is one so singularly apposite, that although we have already submitted a similar specimen of orthography to the reader, we are irresistibly tempted to make a second experiment on his indulgence. The epistolary curiosity, then, which we shall now proceed to transcribe, was addressed by a patient to his medical adviser.

“SIR,

“ My Granmother was very much trubeld With the Gout and dide with it my father was also and dide with it when i was 14 years of age i was in the habbet of Gettin whet feet Every Night by pumping water out of a Celler Wien Cas me to have the tipes fever wich Cas my Defness when i was 23 of age i fell in the Water betwen the ice and i have Bin in the habbet of Gettin wet when traviling i have Bin trubbelled with Gout for seven years

“ Your most humbel

“ Servent

. ”

Among the various kinds of spelling may be enumerated spelling for a favor ; or giving what is called a broad hint.

Certain rules for the division of words into syllables are laid down in some grammars, and we should be very glad to follow the established usage, but limited as we are by considerations of comicality and space, we cannot afford to give more than two very general directions. If you do not know how to spell a word, look it out in the dictionary, and if you have no dictionary by you, write the word in such a way, that, while it may be guessed at, it shall not be legible.

CHAPTER III.

OF WORDS IN GENERAL.

THERE is no one question that we are aware of more puzzling than this, "What is your opinion of things in general?" Words in general are, fortunately for us, a subject on which the formation of an opinion is somewhat more easy. Words stand for things: they are a sort of counters, checks, bank-notes, and sometimes, indeed, they are notes for which people get a great deal of money. Such words, however, are, alas! not generally English words, but Italian. Strange! that so much should be given for a mere song. It is quite clear that the givers, whatever may be their pretensions to a refined or literary taste, must be entirely unacquainted with Wordsworth.

Fine words are oily enough, and he who uses them is vulgarly said to "cut it fat;" but for all that it is well known that they will not butter parsnips.

Some say that words are but wind: for this reason, when people are having words, it is often said, that "the wind's up."

Different words please different people. Philosophers are fond of hard words; pedants of tough words, long words, and crackjaw words; bullies, of rough words; boasters, of big words; the rising generation, of slang words; fashionable people, of French words; wits, of sharp words and smart words; and ladies, of nice words, sweet words, soft words, and soothing words; and, indeed, of words in general.

Words (when spoken) are articulate sounds used by common consent as signs of our ideas.

A word of one syllable is called a Monosyllable: as, you, are, a, great, oaf.

A word of two syllables is named a Dissyllable; as, cat-gut, mu-sic.

A word of three syllables is termed a Trisyllable; as, Mag-net-ism, Mum-mer-y.

A word of four or more syllables is entitled a Polysyllable; as, in-ter-mi-na-ble, cir-cum-lo-cu-ti-on, ex-as-pe-ra-ted, func-ti-o-na-ry, met-ro-po-li-tan, ro-tun-di-ty.

Words of more syllables than one are sometimes comically contracted into one syllable; as, in s'pose for suppose, b'lieve for believe, and 'scuse for excuse: here, perhaps, 'buss, abbreviated from omnibus, deserves to be mentioned.

In like manner, many long words are elegantly trimmed and shortened; as, ornary for ordinary, 'strornary for extraordinary, and curosimy for curiosity; to which mysterus for mysterious may also be added.

Polysyllables are an essential element in the sublime, both in poetry and in prose; but especially in that species of the sublime which borders very closely on the ridiculous ; as, “ Aldiborontiphoscophormio,

Where left's thou Chrononhotonthologos ?

All words are either primitive or derivative. A primitive word is that which cannot be reduced to any simpler word in the language ; as, brass, York, knave. A derivative word, under the head of which compound words are also included, is that which may be reduced to another and a more simple word in the English language ; as, brazen, Yorkshire, knavery, mud-lark, lighterman. Broadbrim is a derivative word ; but it is one often applied to a very primitive kind of person.

PART II.

ETYMOLOGY.

CHAPTER I.

A COMICAL VIEW OF THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

ETYMOLOGY teaches the varieties, modifications, and derivation of words.

The derivation of words means that which they come from as words; for what they come from as sounds, is another matter. Some words come from the heart, and then they are pathetic; others from the nose, in which case they are ludicrous. The funniest place, however, from which words can come is the stomach. By the way, the Mayor would do well to keep a ventriloquist, from whom, at a moment's notice, he might ascertain the voice of the corporation.

Comic Etymology teaches us the varieties, modifications, and derivation, of words invested with a comic character.

Grammatically speaking, we say that there are, in English, as many sorts of words as a cat is said to have lives, nine; namely, the Article, the Substantive or Noun, the Adjective, the Pronoun, the Verb, the Adverb, the Preposition, the Conjunction, and the Interjection.

Comically speaking, there are a great many sorts of words which we have not room enough to particularise individually. We can therefore only afford to classify them. For instance; there are words which are spoken in the Low Countries, and are High Dutch to persons of quality.

Words in use amongst all those who have to do with horses.

Words that pass between rival cab-men.

Words spoken in a state of intoxication.

Words uttered under excitement.

Words of endearment, addressed by parents to children in arms.

Similar words, sometimes called burning, tender, soft, and broken words, addressed to young ladies, and whispered, lisped, sighed, or drawled, according to circumstances.

Words of honor ; as, tailors' words and shoemakers' words ; which, like the above-mentioned, or lovers' words, are very often broken.

With many other sorts of words, which will be readily suggested by the reader's fancy.

But now let us go on with the parts of speech.

1. An Article is a word prefixed to substantives to point them out, and to show the extent of their meaning ; as, a dandy, an ape, the simpleton.

One kind of comic article is otherwise denominated an oddity, or queer article.

Another kind of comic article is often to be met with in some of our monthly magazines.

2. A Substantive or Noun is the name of anything that exists, or of which we have any notion ; as, tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor, apothecary, ploughboy, thief.

Now the above definition of a substantive is Lindley Murray's, not ours. We mention this, because we have an objection, though, not, perhaps, a serious one, to urge against it ; for, in the first place, we have “ no notion ” of impudence, and yet impudence is a substantive ; and, in the second, we invite attention to the following piece of Logic,

A substantive is something,
But nothing is a substantive ;
Therefore, nothing is something.

A substantive may generally be known by its taking an article before it, and by its making sense of itself ; as, a treat, the mulligrubs, an ache.

3. An Adjective is a word joined to a substantive to denote its quality ; as a ragged regiment, an odd set.

You may distinguish an adjective by its making sense with the word thing : as, a poor thing, a sweet thing, a cool thing ; or with any particular substantive, as a ticklish position, an awkward mistake, a strange step.

4. A Pronoun is a word used in lieu of a noun, in order to avoid tautology : as, “ The man wants calves ; he is a lath ; he is a walking-stick.”

5. A Verb is a word which signifies to be, to do, or to suffer : as, I am ; I calculate ; I am fixed.

A verb may usually be distinguished by its making sense with a personal pronoun, or with the word to before it : as I yell, he grins, they caper ; or to drink, to smoke, to chew.

Fashionable accomplishments !

Certain substantives are, with peculiar elegance, and by persons who call themselves genteel, converted into verbs : as, “ Do you wine ? ” “ Will you liquor ? ”

6. An Adverb is a part of speech which, joined to a verb, an adjective, or another adverb, serves to express some quality or circumstance concerning it : as, “ Sho swears dreadfully ; she is incorrigibly lazy ; and she is almost continually in liquor."

7. An Adverb is generally characterised by answering to the question, How ? how much ? when ? or where ? as in the verse, "Merrily danced the Quaker's wife," the answer to the question, How did she dance ? is, merrily.

8. Prepositions serve to connect words together, and to show the relation between them : as,

"Off with his head, so much for Buckingham!"

9. A Conjunction is used to connect not only words, but sentences also : as, Smith and Jones are happy because they are single. A miss is as good as a mile.

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS

10. An Interjection is a short word denoting passion or emotion: as, ‘Oh, Sophonisba! Sophonisba, oh!’ Pshaw! Pish! Pooh! Bah! Ah! Au! Eughph! Yaw! Hum! Ha! Lauk! La! Lor! Heigho! Well! There! &c.

Oh! Sir, stop that dog!

Among the foregoing interjections there may, perhaps, be some unhonored by the adoption of genius, and unknown in the domains of literature. For the present notice of them some apology may be required, but little will be given; their insertion may excite astonishment, but their omission would have provoked complaint: though unprovided with a Johnsonian title to a place in the English vocabulary, they have long been recognised by the popular voice; and let it be remembered, that as custom supplies the defects of legislation, so that which is not sanctioned by magisterial authority may nevertheless be justified by vernacular usage.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE ARTICLES.

THE Articles in English are two, a and the ; a becomes an before a vowel, and before an h which is not sounded : as, an exquisite, an hour-glass. But if the h be pronounced, the a only is used : as, a homicide, a homœopathist, a hum.

A or an is called the indefinite article, because it is used, in a vague sense, to point out some one thing belonging to a certain kind, but in other respects indeterminate ; as,

“ A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse ! ”

So say grammarians. Eating-house keepers tell a different story. A cheese, in common discourse, means an object of a certain shape, size, weight, and so on, entire and perfect ; so that to call half a cheese a cheese, would constitute a flaw in an indictment against a thief who had stolen one. But a waiter will term a fraction, or a modicum of cheese, a cheese ; a plate-full of pudding, a pudding ; and a stick of celery, a salary. Here we are reminded of the famous exclamation of one of these gentry :—“ Sir ! there’s two teas and a brandy-and-water just sloped without paying ! ”

The is termed the definite article, inasmuch as it denotes what particular thing or things are meant as.

“ The miller he stole corn,
The weaver he stole yarn,
 And the little tailor he stole broad-cloth
 To keep the three rogues warm.”

A substantive to which no article is prefixed is taken in a general sense; as, "Apple sauce is proper for goose;" that is, for all geese.

APPLE-SAUCE.

A few additional remarks may advantageously be made with respect to the articles. The mere substitution of the definite for the indefinite article is capable of changing entirely the meaning of a sentence. "That is a ticket" is the assertion of a certain fact; but "That is the ticket!" means something which is quite different.

The article is not prefixed to a proper name; as, Stubbs, Wiggins, Brown or Hobson, except for the sake of distinguishing a particular family, or description of persons; as, He is a Burke; that is, one of the Burkes, or a person resembling Burke.

The definite article is frequently used with adverbs in the comparative and superlative degree : as, “ The longer I live, the taller, I grow ;” or, as we have all heard the showman say, “ This here, gentlemen and ladies, is the vonderful heagle of the sun; the 'otterer it grows, the higherer he flies!"

CHAPTER III.

SECTION I.

OF SUBSTANTIVES IN GENERAL.

SUBSTANTIVES are either proper or common.

Proper names, or substantives, are the names belonging to individuals: as William, Birmingham.

These are sometimes converted into nicknames, or improper names: as Bill, Brummagem.

Common names, or substantives, denote kinds containing many sorts, or sorts containing many individuals under them: as brute, beast, bumpkin, cherub, infant, goblin, &c.

Proper names, when an article is prefixed to them, are employed as common names: as, "They thought him a perfect Chesterfield; he quite astonished the Browns."

Common names, on the other hand, are made to denote individuals, by the addition of articles or pronouns: as,

"There was a little man, and he had a little gun."

"That boy will be the death of me!"

Substantives are considered according to gender, number, and case; they are all of the third person when spoken of, and of the second when spoken to: as,

Matilda, fairest maid, who art

In countless bumpers toasted,

O let thy pity baste the heart
Thy fatal charms have roasted !

SECTION II.

OF GENDER.

The distinction between nouns with regard to sex is called Gender. There are three genders : the Masculine, the Feminine, and the Neuter.

The masculine gender belongs to animals of the male kind : as, a fop, a jackass, a boar, a poet, a lion.

The feminine gender is peculiar to animals of the female kind : as, a poetess, a lioness, a goose.

The neuter gender is that of objects which are neither males nor females: as, a toast, a tankard, a pot, a pipe, a pudding, a pie, a sausage, &c. &c. &c.

We might go on to enumerate an infinity of objects of the neuter gender, of all sorts and kinds; but in the selection of the foregoing examples we have been guided by two considerations:—

1. The desire of exciting agreeable emotions in the mind of the reader.

2. The wish to illustrate the following proposition, “That almost everything nice is also neuter.”

Except, however, a nice young lady, a nice duck. and one or two other nice things, which we do not at present remember.

Some neuter substantives are by a figure of speech converted into the masculine or feminine gender: thus we say of the sun, that when he shines upon a Socialist, he shines upon a thief; and of the moon, that she affects the minds of lovers.

There are certain nouns with which notions of strength, vigor, and the like qualities, are more particularly connected; and these are the neuter substantives which are figuratively rendered masculine. On the other hand, beauty, amiability, and so forth, are held to invest words with a feminine character. Thus the sun is said to be masculine, and the moon feminine. But for our own part, and our view is confirmed by the discoveries of astronomy, we believe that the sun is called masculine from his supporting and sustaining the moon, and finding her the wherewithal to shine away as she does of a night, when all quiet people are in bed; and from his being obliged to keep such a family of stars besides. The moon, we think, is accounted feminine, because she is thus maintained and kept up in her splendor, like a fine lady, by her husband the sun. Furthermore, the moon is continually changing; on which account alone she might be referred to the feminine gender. The earth is feminine, tricked out, as she is, with gems and flowers. Cities and towns are likewise feminine, because there are as many windings, turnings, and little odd corners in them as there are in the female mind. A ship is feminine, inasmuch as she is blown about by every wind. Virtue is feminine by courtesy. Fortune and misfortune, like mother and daughter, are both feminine. The Church is feminine, because she is married to the state; or married to the state because she is feminine—we do not know which. Time is masculine, because he is so trifled with by the ladies.

"Shan't I shine to-night, dear?"

The English language distinguishes the sex in three manners; namely,

1. By different words; as,

MALE.	FEMALE.
Bachelor	Maid.
Brother	Sister.
Wizard	Witch.
Father	Mother, &c.

And several other

Words we don't mention,
 (Pray pardon the crime,)
 Worth your attention,
 But wanting in rhyme.

2. By a difference of termination ; as,

MALE.

Poet

Lion

FEMALE.

Poetess.

Lioness, &c.

3. By a noun, pronoun, or adjective being prefixed to the substantive ; as,

MALE.

A cock-lobster

A jack-ass

A man-servant,
or flunkey.

A male flirt (a rare animal.)

FEMALE.

A hen-lobster.

A jenny-ass (vernacular.)

A maid-servant,
or Abigail.

A female flirt (a common animal.)

We have heard it said, that every Jack has his Jill. That may be ; but it is by no means true that every cock has his hen ; for there is a Cock-swain, but no Hen-swain.

Cock-eye, but no Hen-eye.

Cock-ade, but no Hen-ade.

Cock-atrice, but no Hen-atrice.

Cock-horse, but no Hen-horse.

Cock-ney, but no Hen-ney.

Then we have a weather-cock, but no weather-hen, a turn-cock, but no turn-hen ; and many a jolly cock, but not one jolly hen ; unless we except some of those by whom their mates are pecked.

Some words ; as, parent, child, cousin, friend, neighbour, servant and several others, are either male or female, according to circumstances.

It is a great pity that our language is so poor in the terminations that denote gender. Were we to say of a woman that she is a rogue, a knave, a scamp, or a vagabond, we feel that we should use, not only strong but improper expressions. Yet we have no corresponding terms to apply, in case of necessity, to the female. Why is this? Doubtless because we never want them. For the same reason, our forefathers transmitted to us the words, philosopher, astronomer, philologist, and so forth, without any feminine equivalent. Alas! for the wisdom of our ancestors! They never calculated on the March of Intellect.

SECTION III.

OF NUMBER.

Number is the consideration of an object as one or more; as, one poet, two, three, four, five poets; and so on, ad infinitum.

The singular number expresses one object only; as a towel, a viper.

The plural signifies more objects than one; as, towels, vipers.

Some nouns are used only in the singular number; dirt, pitch, tallow, grease, filth, butter, asparagus, &c.; others only in the plural; as, galligaskins, breeches, &c.

Some words are the same in both numbers; as sheep, swine, and some others.

The plural number of nouns is usually formed by adding s to the singular; as, dove, doves, love, loves, &c.

Julia, dove returns to dove,
 Quid pro quo, and love for love;
 Happy in our mutual loves,
 Let us live like turtle doves!

When, however, the substantive singular ends in x, ch soft, sh, ss, or s, we add es in the plural.

But remember, though box
 In the plural makes boxes,
 That the plural of ox
 Should be oxen, not oxes.

SECTION IV.

OF CASE.

There is nearly as much difference between Latin and English substantives, with respect to the number of cases pertaining to each, as there is between a quack-doctor and a physician ; for while in Latin substantives have six cases, in English they have but three. But the analogy should not be strained too far ; for the fools in the world (who furnish the quack with his cases) more than double the number of the wise.

A VERY BAD CASE.

The cases of substantives are these: the Nominative, the Possessive or Genitive, and the Objective or Accusative.

The Nominative Case merely expresses the name of a thing, or the subject of the verb : as, "The doctors differ ;"—"The patient dies !"

Possession, which is nine points of the law, is what is signified by the Possessive Case. This case is distinguished by an apostrophe, with the letter s subjoined to it : as, "My soul's idol !"—"A pudding's end."

But when the plural ends in s, the apostrophe only is retained, and the other s is omitted: as, “The Ministers’ Step;”—“The Rogues’ March;”—“Crocodiles’ tears;”—“Butchers’ mourning.”

When the singular terminates in ss, the letter s is sometimes, in like manner, dispensed with: as, “For goodness’ sake!”—“For righteousness’ sake!” Nevertheless, we have no objection to “Burgess’s” Stout.

The Objective Case follows a verb active, and expresses the object of an action, or of a relation: as “Spring beat Bill;” that is, Bill or “William Neate.” Hence, perhaps, the phrase, “I’ll lick you elegant.”

The Objective Case is also used with a preposition: as, “You are in a mess.”

English substantives may be declined in the following manner:

SINGULAR.

What is the nominative case
Of her who used to wash your face,
Your hair to comb, your boots to lace?

A mother!

What the possessive? Whose the slap
That taught you not to spill your pap,
Or to avoid a like mishap?

A mother’s!

And shall I the objective show?
What do I hear where’er I go?
How is your?—whom they mean I know,
My mother!

PLURAL.

Who are the anxious watchers o’er
The slumbers of a little bore,

That screams whene'er it doesn't snore ?

Why, mothers !

Whose pity wipes its piping eyes,
And stills maturer childhood's cries,
Stopping its mouth with cakes and pies ?

Oh ! mother's !

And whom, when master, fierce and fell,
Dusts truant varlets' jackets well,
Whom do they, roaring, run and tell ?

Their mothers !

CHAPTER IV.

OF ADJECTIVES.

SECTION I.

OF THE NATURE OF ADJECTIVES AND THE DEGREES OF COMPARISON.

AN English Adjective, whatever may be its gender, number, or case, like a rusty weathercock, never varies. Thus we say, "A certain cabinet ; certain rogues."

But as a rusty weathercock may vary in being more or less rusty, so an adjective varies in the degrees of comparison.

The degrees of comparison, like the Genders, the Graces, the Fates, the Kings of Cologne, the Weird Sisters, and many other things, are three ; the Positive, the Comparative, and the Superlative.

The Positive state simply expresses the quality of an object ; as, fat, ugly, foolish.

The Comparative degree increases or lessens the signification of the positive ; as fatter, uglier, more foolish, less foolish.

The Superlative decree increases or lessens the positive to the highest or lowest degree ; as fattest, ugliest, most foolish, least foolish.

Amongst the ancients, Ulysses must have been the fattest, because nobody could compass him.

Aristides the Just was the ugliest, because he was so very plain.

The most foolish, undoubtedly, was Homer ; for who was more natural than he ?

The positive becomes the comparative by the addition of r or er ; and the superlative by the addition of st or est to the end of it ; as, brown, browner, brownest ; stout, stouter, stoutest ; heavy, heavier, heaviest ; wet, wetter, wettest. The adverbs more and most, prefixed to the adjective, also form the superlative degree ; as, heavy, more heavy, most heavy.

Monosyllables are usually compared by er and est, and dissyllables by more and most ; except dissyllables ending in y or in le before a mute, or those which are accented on the last syllable ; for these, like monosyllables, easily admit of er and est. But these terminations are scarcely ever used in comparing words of more than two syllables.

We have some words, which, from custom, are irregular in respect of comparison ; as, good, better, best ; bad, worse, worst, &c. ; but the Yankee's "notion" of comparison was decidedly funny ; "My uncle's a tarnation rogue ; but I'm a tarnationer."

SECTION II.

A FEW REMARKS ON THE SUBJECT OF COMPARISON.

LINDLEY MURRAY judiciously observes, that "if we consider the subject of comparison attentively, we shall perceive that the degrees of it are infinite in number, or at least indefinite:" and he proceeds to say, "A mountain is larger than a mite; by how many degrees? How much bigger is the earth than a grain of sand? By how many degrees was Socrates wiser than Alcibiades? or by how many is snow whiter than this paper? It is plain," quoth Lindley, "that to these and the like questions no definite answers can be returned."

No; but an impertinent one may. Ask the first news-boy you meet, any one of these questions, and see if he does not immediately respond, "Ax my eye;" or, "As much again as half."

But when quantity can be exactly measured, the degrees of excess may be exactly ascertained. A foot is just twelve times as long as an inch; a tailor is nine times less than a man.

Moreover, to compensate for the indefiniteness of the degrees of comparison, we use certain adverbs and words of like import, whereby we render our meaning tolerably intelligible; as, "Byron was a much greater poet than Muggins." "Honey is a great deal sweeter than wax." "Sugar is considerably more pleasant than the cane." "Maria says, that Dick the butcher is by far the most killing young man she knows."

The words very, exceedingly, and the like, placed before the positive, give it the force of the superlative; and this is called by some the superlative of eminence, as distinguished from the superlative of comparison. Thus, Very Reverend is termed the superlative of eminence, although it is the title of a dean, not of a cardinal; and Most Reverend, the appellation of an Archbishop, is called the superlative of comparison.

A Bishop, in our opinion, is Most Excellent.

The comparative is sometimes so employed as to express the same pre-eminence or inferiority as the superlative. For instance; the sentence, "Of all the cultivators of science, the botanist is the most crafty," has the same meaning as the following: "The botanist is more crafty than any other cultivator of science."

Why? some of our readers will ask—

Because he is acquainted with all sorts of plants.

CHAPTER V.

OF PRONOUNS.

PRONOUNS or proxy-nouns are of three kinds; namely, the Personal, the Relative, and the Adjective Pronouns.

Note.—That when we said, some few pages back, that a pronoun was a word used instead of a noun, we did not mean to call such words as thingumibob, what-a-name, what-d'ye-call-it, and the like, pronouns.

And that, although we shall proceed to treat of the pronouns in the English language, we shall have nothing to do, at present, with what some people please to call pronoun-ciation.

SECTION I.

OF THE PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

“MR. ADDAMS, don't be personal, Sir!”

“I'm not, Sir.”

“You am, Sir!”

“What did I say, Sir?—tell me that.”

“You reflected on my perfection, Sir; you said, as there was some people as always stuck up for the cloth; and you insinuated that certain parties dined off goose by means of cabbaging from their customers. I ask any gentleman in the room, if that an't personal.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

"Vell, Sir, vot I says I'll stick to."

"Yes, Sir, like vax, as the saying is."

"Wot d'ye mean by that, Sir?"

"Wot I say, Sir!"

"You 're a individual, Sir!"

"You 're another, Sir!"

"You 're no gentleman, Sir!"

"You 're a humbug, Sir!"

"You 're a knave, Sir!"

"You 're a rogue, Sir!"

"You 're a wagabond, Sir!"

"You 're a willain, Sir!"

"You 're a tailor, Sir!"

"You 're a cobbler, Sir!" (Order! order! chair! chair! &c.

The above is what is called personal language. How many different things one word serves to express in English! A pronoun may be as personal as possible, and yet nobody will take offence at it.

There are five Personal Pronouns; namely, I, thou, he, she, it; with their plurals, we, ye or you, they.

Personal Pronouns admit of person, number, gender, and case.

Pronouns have three persons in each number.

In the Singulår;

I, is the first person.

Thou, is the second person.

He, she, or it, is the third person.

In the plural;

We, is the first person.

Ye or you, is the second person.

They, is the third person.

This account of persons will be very intelligible when the following Pastoral Fragment is reflected on :

HE.

*I love thee, Susan, on my life :
Thou art the maiden for a wife.
He who lives single is an ass ;
She who ne'er weds a luckless lass.
It's tiresome work to live alone ;
So come with me, and be my own.*

SHE.

*We maids are oft by men deceived ;
Ye don't deserve to be believed ;
You don't—but there's my hand—heigho !
They tell us, women can't say no !*

The speaker or speakers are of the first person ; those spoken to, of the second ; and those spoken of, of the third.

Of the three persons, the first is the most universally admired.

The second is the object of much adulation and flattery, and now and then of a little abuse.

The third person is generally made small account of ; and, amongst other grievances, suffers a great deal from being frequently bitten about the back.

The Numbers of pronouns, like those of substantives, are, as we have already seen, two ; the singular and the plural.

In addressing yourself to anybody, it is customary to use the second person plural instead of the singular. This practice most probably arose from a notion, that to be thought twice the man that the speaker was, gratified the vanity of the person addressed. Thus, the French put a double Monsieur on the backs of their letters.

Editors say "We," instead of "I," out of modesty.

The Quakers continue to say "thee" and "thou," in the use of which pronouns, as well as in the wearing of broad-brimmed hats and of stand-up collars, they perceive a peculiar sanctity.

Gender has to do only with the third person singular of the pronouns, he, she, it. He is masculine ; she is feminine ; it is neuter.

Pronouns have the like cases with substantives ; the nominative, the possessive, and the objective.

Would that they were the hardest cases to be met with in this country !

The personal pronouns are thus declined :—

CASE.	FIRST PERSON SINGULAR.	FIRST PERSON PLURAL.
-------	------------------------	----------------------

Nom.	I	We.
------	---	-----

Poss.	Mine	Ours.
-------	------	-------

Obj.	Me	Us.
------	----	-----

CASE.	SECOND PERSON.	SECOND PERSON.
-------	----------------	----------------

Nom.	Thou	Ye or you.
------	------	------------

Poss.	Thine	Yours.
-------	-------	--------

Obj.	Thee	You.
------	------	------

Now the third person singular, as we before observed, has genders ; and we shall therefore decline it in a different way. Variety is charming.

THIRD PERSON SINGULAR.

CASE.	MASC.	FEM.	NEUT.
-------	-------	------	-------

Nom.	He	She	It.
------	----	-----	-----

Poss.	His	Hers	Its.
-------	-----	------	------

Obj.	Him	Her	It.
------	-----	-----	-----

CASE.

Nom.

PLURAL.

They.

CASE.	PLURAL.
POSS.	Theirs.
Obj.	Them.

Reader, Mem.

We beg to inform thee, that the third person plural has no distinction of gender.

SECTION II.

OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

THE Pronouns called Relative are such as relate, for the most part, to some word or phrase, called the antecedent, on account of its going before : they are, who, which, and that : as, “The man who does not drink enough when he can get it, is a fool : but he that drinks too much is a beast.”

What is usually equivalent to that which, and is, therefore, a kind of compound relative, containing both the antecedent and the relative ; as, “You want what you’ll very soon have !” that is to say, the thing which you will very soon have.

Who is applied to persons, which to animals and things without life ; as, “He is a gentleman who keeps a horse and lives respectably.” To the dog which pinned the old woman, they cried, ‘Cæsar !’ ”

That, as a relative, is used to prevent the too frequent repetition of who and which, and is applied both to persons and things ; as, He that stops the bottle is a Cork man.” “This is the house that Jack built.”

Who is of both numbers ; and so is an Editor ; for, according to what we observed just now, he is both singular and plural. Who, we repeat, is of both numbers, and is thus declined :—

SINGULAR AND PLURAL.

Nominative.	Who
	Is the maiden to woo ?
Genitive.	Whose
	Hand shall I choose ?
Accusative.	Whom
	To despair shall I doom ?

Which, that and what are indeclinable ; except that whose is sometimes used as the possessive case of which ; as,

“ The roe, poor dear, laments amain,
Whose sweet hart was by hunter slain.”

Who, which, and what, when they are used in asking questions, are called Interrogatives ; as, “ Who is Mr. Walker ?” “ Which is the left side of a round plum-pudding ?” “ What is the damage ?”

Those who have made popular phraseology their study, will have found that which is sometimes used for whereas, and words of like signification ; as in Dean Swift’s “ Mary the Cookmaid’s Letter to Dr. Sheridan :”

“ And now I know whereby you would fain make an excuse,

Because my master one day in anger call’d you a goose ;

Which, and I am sure I have been his servant since October,

And he never called me worse than sweetheart, drunk or sober.”

What, or, to speak more improperly, wot, is generally substituted by cabmen and hack-drivers for who ; as, “ The donkey wot wouldn’t go.” “ The girl wot sweeps the crossing.”

That, likewise, is very frequently rejected by the vulgar, who use as in its place ; as, "Them as asks shan't have any ; and them as don't ask don't want any."

SECTION III.

OF THE ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

ADJECTIVE pronouns partake of the nature of both pronouns and adjectives. They may be subdivided into four sorts : the possessive, the distributive, the demonstrative, and the indefinite.

The possessive pronouns are those which imply possession or property. Of these there are seven ; namely, my, thy, his, her, our, your, their.

The word self is added to possessives ; as, myself, yourself, "Says I to myself, says I." Self is also sometimes used with personal pronouns ; as, himself, itself, themselves. His self is a common, but not a proper expression.

SELF-ESTEEM.

The distributive are three ; each, every, either ; they denote the individual persons or things separately, which, when taken together, make up a number. m

Each is used when two or more persons or things are mentioned singly ; as, “each of the Catos ;” “each of the Browns.”

Every relates to one out of several ; as, “Every mare is a horse, but every horse is not a mare.”

Either refers to one out of two ; as,

“When I between two jockeys ride,
I have a knave on either side.”

Neither signifies “not either ;” as, “Neither of the Bacons was related to Hogg.”

The demonstrative pronouns precisely point out the subjects to which they relate ; such are this and that, with their plurals these and those ; as, “This is a Hoo-sier lad ; that is a Yankee school-master.”

This refers to the nearest person or thing, and to the latter or last mentioned ; that to the most distant, and to the former or first mentioned ; as, “This is a man ; that is a nondescript.” “At the period of the Reformation in Scotland, a curious contrast between the ancient and modern ecclesiastical systems was observed ; for while that had been always maintained by a Bull, this was now supported by a Knox.”

The indefinite are those which express their subjects in an indefinite or general manner ; as, some, other, any, one, all, such, &c.

When the definite article the comes before the word other, those who do not know better, are accustomed to strike out the he in the, and to say, t'other.

The same persons also use other in the comparative degree ; for sometimes, instead of saying quite the reverse, or perhaps rewerse, they avail themselves of the expression more t'other.

So much for the pronouns.

CHAPTER VI.

OF VERBS.

SECTION I.

OF THE NATURE OF VERBS IN GENERAL.

THE nature of Verbs in general, and that in all languages, is, that they are the most difficult things in the Grammar.

Verbs are divided into Active, Passive, and Neuter ; and also into Regular, Irregular, and Defective. To these divisions we beg to add another ; Verbs Comic.

A Verb Active implies an agent, and an object acted upon ; as, to love ; “ I love Wilhelmina Stubbs.” Here, I am the agent ; that is, the lover ; and Wilhelmina Stubbs is the object acted upon, or the beloved object.

A Verb Passive expresses the suffering, feeling, or undergoing of something ; and therefore implies an object acted upon, and an agent by which it is acted upon ; as, to be loved ; “ Wilhelmina Stubbs is loved by me.”

A Verb Neuter expresses neither action nor passion, but a state of being ; as, I bounce, I lie.

"Fact, Madam!"
 "Gracious, Major!"

Of Verbs Regular, Irregular, and Defective, we shall have somewhat to say hereafter.

Verbs Comic are, for the most part, verbs which cannot be found in the dictionary, and are used to express ordinary actions in a jocular manner ; as, to "bolt," to "mizzle," which signify to go or to depart ; to "bone," to "prig," that is to say, to steal ; to "collar," which means to seize, an expression probably derived from the mode of prehension, or rather apprehension characteristic of the New Police, as it is one very much in the mouths of those who most frequently come in contact with that body: to "liquor," or drink; to "grub," or eat; to "sell," or deceive, &c.

Under the head of Verbs Comic, the Yankeeisms, I "calculate," I "reckon," I "realise," I "guess," and the like, may also be properly enumerated.

Auxiliary, or helping Verbs (by the way we marvel that the New Englanders do not call their servants auxiliaries instead of helps) are those, by the help of which we are chiefly enabled to conjugate our verbs in English. They are, do, be, have, shall, will, may, can, with their variations; and let and must, which have no variation.

Let, however, when it is anything but a helping verb, as, for instance, when it signifies to hinder, makes lettest and letteth. The phrase, "This House to Let," generally used instead of "to be let," meaning in fact, the reverse of what is intended to convey, is really a piece of comic English.

To verbs belong Number, Person, Mood, and Tense. These may be called the properties of a verb; and like those of opium, they are soporiferous properties. There are two very important objects which the writer of every book has, or ought to have in view, to get a reader who is wide awake, and to keep him so:—the latter of which, when Number, Person, Mood, and Tense are to be treated of, is no such easy matter; seeing that the said writer is then in some danger of going to sleep himself. Never mind. If we nod, let the reader wink. What can't be cured must be endured.

SECTION II.

OF NUMBER AND PERSON.

VERBS have two numbers, the Singular and the Plural : as, "I fiddle, we fiddle," &c.

In each number there are three persons ; as,

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
First Person	I love	We love.
Second Person	Thou lovest	Ye or you love.
Third Person	He loves	They love.

What a deal there is in every Grammar about love ! Here the following Lines, by a Young Lady, (now no more,) addressed to Lindley Murray, deserve to be recorded :—

"Oh, Murray ! fatal name to me,
 Thy burning page with tears is wet ,
 Since first 'to love' I learned of thee,
 Teach me, ah ! teach me 'to forget !'"

SECTION III.

OF MOODS AND PARTICIPLES.

Mood or Mode is a particular form of the verb, or a certain variation which it undergoes, showing the manner in which the being, action, or passion, is represented.

The moods of verbs are five, the Indicative, the Imperative, the Potential, the Subjunctive, and the Infinitive.

The Indicative Mood simply points out or declares a thing : as, "He teaches, he is taught ;" or it asks a question : as, "Does he teach ? Is he taught ?"

Q. Why is old age the best teacher ?

A. Because he gives you the most wrinkles.

Q. Why does a rope support a rope-dancer ?

A. Because it is taught.

The Imperative Mood commands, exhorts, entreats or permits: as, "Vanish thou ; trot ye ; let us hop ; be off!"

The Potential Mood implies possibility or liberty, power, will, or obligation: as, "A waiter may be honest. You may stand upon truth or lie. I can filch. He would cozen. They should learn."

The Subjunctive Mood is used to represent a thing as done conditionally ; and is preceded by a conjunction, expressed or understood, and accompanied by another verb: as, "If the skies should fall, larks would be caught." "Were I to punch your head, I should serve you right:" that is, "if I were to punch your head."

The Infinitive Mood expresses a thing generally, without limitation, and without any distinction of number or person: as, "to quarrel, to fight, to be licked."

The Participle is a peculiar form of the verb, and is so called, because it participates in the properties both of a verb and of an adjective: as, "May I have the pleasure of dancing with you?" "Mounted on a tub he addressed the bystanders." "Having uplifted a stave, they departed."

The Participles are three ; the Present or Active, the Perfect or Passive, and the Compound Perfect: as, "I felt nervous at the thought of popping the question, but that once popped, I was not sorry for having popped it."

The worst of popping the question is, that the report is always sure to get abroad.

SECTION IV.

OF THE TENSES.

TENSE is the distinction of time, and consists of six divisions, namely, the Present, the Imperfect, the Perfect, the Pluperfect, and the First and Second Future Tenses.

Time is also distinguished by a fore-loek, scythe, and hour-glass; but the youthful reader must bear in mind, that these things are not to be confounded with tenses.

The Present Tense, as its name implies, represents an action or event occurring at the present time: as "I lament; rogues prosper; the mob rules."

The Imperfect Tense represents a past action or event, but which, like a nutton chop, may be either thoroughly done, or not thoroughly done; were it meet, we should say, under-done: as,

"When I was a little boy some fifteen years ago,

My mammy doted on me—Lork! she mude me quite a show."

"When our reporter left, the Honorable Gentleman was still on his legs."

The legs of most "Honorable Gentlemen" must be tolerably stout ones; for the "majority" do not stand on trifles. However, we are not going to commit ourselves, like some folks, nor to get committed, like other folks; so we will leave "Honorable Gentlemen" to manage matters their own way.

The Perfect Tense declares a thing to have been done at some time, though an indefinite one, antecedent to the present time. That, however, which the Perfect Tense represents as done, is completely, or, as we say of a green one, when he is humbugged by the thimble-rig people, regularly done; as, "I have been out on the river." "I have caught a crab."

Catching a crab is a thing regularly (in another sense than completely) done, when civic swains pull young ladies up to Richmond. We beg to inform persons unacquainted with aquatic phraseology, that "pulling up" young ladies, or others, is a very different thing from "pulling up" an omnibus conductor or a cabman. What an equivocal language is ours! How much less agreeable to be “pulled up” at the Police office than to be “pulled up” in a row-boat! how wide the discrepancy between “pulling up” radishes and “pulling up” horses!

The Pluperfect Tense represents a thing as doubly past; that is, as past previously to some other point of time also past; as, “I fell in love before I had arrived at years of discretion.”

The First Future Tense represents the action as yet to come, either at a certain or an uncertain time; as “The tailor will send my coat home to-morrow: and when I find it perfectly convenient, I shall pay him.”

The Second Future intimates that the action will be completed at or before the time of another future action or event ; as, " I wonder how many conquests I shall have made by to-morrow morning."

N. B. One ball is often the means of killing a great many people.

The consideration of the tenses suggests various moral reflections to the thinking mind. A couple of examples will perhaps suffice ;—

1. Present, though moderate fruition, is preferable to splendid, but contingent futurity ; i. e. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

2. Imperfect nutrition is less to be deprecated than privation of aliment ;—a new way of putting an old proverb, which we need not again insert, respecting half a loaf.

SECTION V.

THE CONJUGATION OF THE AUXILIARY VERBS TO HAVE AND TO BE.

WE have observed that boys, in conjugating verbs, give no indications of delight, except that which an ingenious disposition always feels in the acquisition of knowledge. Now, having arrived at that part of the Grammar in which it becomes necessary that these same verbs should be considered, we feel ourselves in an awkward dilemma. The omission of the conjugations is a serious omission—which, of course, is objectionable in a comic work—and the insertion of them would be equally serious, and therefore quite as improper. What shall we do ? We will adopt a middle course ; referring the reader to Murray and other talented authors for full information on these matters ; and requesting him to be content with our confining ourselves to what is more especially suitable to these pages—a glance at the Comicalities of verbs.

If being a youngster I had not been smitten,
 Of having been jilted I should not complain,
 Take warning from me all ye lads who are bitten,
 When this part of Grammar occurs to your brain.

As there is a certain intensity of feeling abroad, which renders people indisposed to trouble themselves with verbal matters, we shall take the liberty of making very short work of the Regular Verbs. Even Murray can only afford to conjugate one example,—To Love. The learner must amplify this part of the Grammar for himself: and we recommend him to substitute for “to love,” some word less harrowing to a sensitive mind: as, “to fleece, to tax,” verbs which excite disagreeable emotions only in a sordid one; and which also, by association of ideas, conduct us to useful reflections on Political Economy. We advise all whom it may concern, however, to pay the greatest attention to this part of the Grammar, and before they come to the Verbs Regular, to make a particular study of the Auxiliary Verbs: not only for the excellent reasons set forth in “Tristram Shandy,” but also to avoid those awkward mistakes in which the Comicalities of the Verbs, or Verbal Comicalities, chiefly consist.

“Did it rain to-morrow?” asked Monsieur Grenouille.

“Yes it was!” replied Monsieur Crapaud.

We propose the following as an auxiliary mode of conjugating verbs:—“I love to roam on the crested foam, Thou lovest to roam on the crested foam, He loves to roam on the crested foam, We love to roam on the crested foam, Ye or you love to roam on the crested foam, They love to roam on the crested foam," &c.

The Auxiliary Verbs, too, are very useful when a peculiar emphasis is required: as, "I shall give you a drubbing!" "Will you?" "I know a trick worth two of that." "Do you, though?" "It might," as the Quaker said to the Yankee, who wanted to know what his name might be; "it might be Beelzebub, but it is not."

Now we may as well say what we have to say about the conjugation of regular verbs active.

SECTION VI.

THE CONJUGATION OF REGULAR VERBS ACTIVE.

REGULAR VERBS ACTIVE are known by their forming their imperfect tense of the indicative mood, and their perfect participle, by adding to the verb ed, or d only when the verb ends in e: as,

PRESENT	IMPERFECT.	PERF. PARTICIP.
I reckon	I reckoned.	Reckoned.
I realise.	I realised.	Realised.

Here should follow the conjugation of the regular active verb, To Love ; but we have already assigned a good reason for omitting it ; besides which we have to say, that we think it a verb highly unfit for conjugation by youth, as it tends to put ideas into their heads which they would otherwise never have thought of ; and it is moreover our opinion, that several of our most gifted poets may, with reason, have attributed the seunfortunate attachments which, though formed in early youth, served to embitter their whole lives, to the poison which they thus sucked in with the milk, so to speak, of their Mother Tongue, the Grammar. We shall ther fore dismiss Cupid, and he must look for

OTHER LODGINGS.

PASSIVE.

Verbs Passive are said to be regular, when their perfect participle is formed by the addition of d, or ed to the verb: as, from the verb "To bless," is formed the passive, "I am blessed, I was blessed, I shall be blessed," &c.

The conjugation of a passive verb is nothing more than the repetition of that of the auxiliary To Be, the perfect participle being added.

And now, having cut the regular verbs (as Alexander did the Gordian knot) instead of conjugating them, let us proceed to consider the.

IRREGULAR VERBS.

SECTION VII.

IRREGULAR VERBS are those of which the imperfect tense and the perfect participle are not formed by adding d or ed to the verb: as,

PRESENT.	IMPERFECT.	PERFECT PART
I blow.	I blew.	blown.

To say I am blown, is, under certain circumstances, such as windy and tempestuous weather, proper enough; but I am blowed, it will at once be perceived, is not only an ungrammatical, but also a vulgar expression.

Great liberties are taken with the Irregular Verbs, insomuch that in the mouths of some persons, divers of them become doubly irregular in the formation of their participles. Among such Irregular Verbs we may enumerate the following:—

PRESENT.	IMPERFECT.	PERF. OR PASS. PART.
Am	wur	bin.
Burst	bust	busted.

PRESENT.	IMPERFECT.	PERF. OR PASS. PART.
Catch	cotch	cotched.
Come	kim	comed.
Drive	druv	driv.
Freeze	friz	froze.
Give	guv	giv.

SECTION VIII.

OF DEFECTIVE VERBS.

Most men have five senses,
 Most verbs have six tenses ;
 But as there are some folks
 Who are blind, deaf, or dumb folks,
 Just so there are some verbs
 Defective, or rum verbs, which are used only in some of their moods and tenses.

The principal of them are these :—

	IMPERF.	PERF. OR PASS. PART
Can	could	nix.
May	might	—
Shall	should	—
Will	would	—
Must	must	—
Ought	ought	—
—	quoth	—

There is not, perhaps, anything in the defective verbs peculiarly valuable in a comic point of view. However, it should not be forgotten, that Can is one of the signs of the pot-ential Mood ;

Ought, ought, with 1 before it, stands, (in school-boy phrase) for 100.

'Tis naught, so to speak, says Murray.

CHAPTER VII.

OF ADVERBS.

HAVING as great a dislike as the youngest of our readers can have to repetitions, we shall not say what an adverb is over again. It is, nevertheless, right to observe, that some adverbs are compared : as, far, farther, farthest ; near, nearer, nearest. In comparing those which end in ly, we use more and most : as, slowly, more slowly, most slowly.

There are a great many adverbs in the English Language : their number is probably even greater than that of abusive epithets. They are divisible into certain classes ; the chief of which are Number, Order, Place, Time, Quantity, Manner or Quality, Doubt, Affirmation, Negation, Interrogation, and Comparison.

A nice little list, truly ! and perhaps some of our readers may suppose that we are going to exemplify it at length : if so, all we can say with regard to their expectation is, that we wish they may get it gratified. In the meantime, we will not turn our Grammar into a dictionary, to please anybody. However, we have no objection to a brief illustration of the uses and properties of adverbs, as contained in the following passage :—

“ Formerly, when first I began to preach and to teach, whithersoever I went, the little boys followed me, and now and then pelted me with brick-bats, as heretofore they pelted Ebenezer Grimes. And whensoever I opened my mouth, straightways the ungodly began to crow. Oftentimes was I hit in the mouth with an orange : yea, and once, moreover, with a rotten egg :

whereat there was much laughter, which, notwithstanding, I took in good part, and wiped my face and looked pleasantly. For peradventure I said, they will listen to my sermon; yea, and after that we may have a collection. So I was nowise discomfited; wherefore I advise thee, Brother Habakkuk, to take no heed of thy persecutors, seeing that I, whereas I was once little better off than thyself, have now a chapel of mine own. And herein let thy mind be comforted, that, preach as much as thou wilt against the Bishop, thou wilt not, therefore, in these days, be in danger of the pillory. Howbeit," &c.

Vide Life of the late pious and Rev. Samuel Simcox (letter to Habakkuk Brown.)

CHAPTER VIII.

OF PREPOSITIONS.

PREPOSITIONS are, for the most part, put before nouns and pronouns: as, "out of the frying-pan into the fire."

The preposition of is sometimes used as a part of speech of peculiar signification, and one to which no name has as yet been applied: as, "What you been doing of?"

At and up are not rarely used as verbs, but we should scarcely have been justified in so classing them by the authority of any polite writer; such use of them being confined to the vulgar: as, "Now then, Bill, at him again." "So she upped with her fists, and fetched him a whop."

After is improperly pronounced arter, and against, agin: as, "Hallo! Jim, vot are you arter? uon't you know that ere's agin the Law?"

CHAPTER IX.

OF CONJUNCTIONS.

A CONJUNCTION means literally, a union or meeting together. An ill-assorted marriage is A COMICAL CONJUNCTION.

But our conjunctions are used to connect words and sentences, and have nothing to do with the joining of hands. They are chiefly of two sorts, the Copulative and Disjunctive.

The Copulative Conjunction is employed for the connection or continuation of a sentence: as, "Jack and Gill went up the Hill," "I will sing a song if Gubbins will." "A thirsty man is like a Giant because he is a Gog for drink."

The Conjunction Disjunctive is used not only for purposes of connection, but also to express opposition of meaning in different degrees: as, "We pay less for our letters, but shall have to pay more for our coats: they have lightened our postage, but they will increase our taxes.

Conjunctions are the hooks and eyes of Language, in which, as well as in dress, it is very possible to make an awkward use of them: as, "For if the year consist of 365 days 6 hours, and January have 31 days, then the relation between the corpuscular theory of light and the new views of Mr. Owen is at once subverted: for, 'When Ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise:' because 1760 yards make a mile; and it is universally acknowledged that 'war is the madness of many for the gain of a few:' therefore Sir Isaac Newton was right in supposing the diamond to be combustible."

The Siamese twins, it must be admitted, form a singular conjunction.

A tin pot fastened to a dog's tail is a disagreeable conjunction to the unfortunate animal.

A happy pair may be regarded as an uncommon conjunction.

The word as, so often used in this and other Grammars, is a conjunction: as, "Mrs. A. is as well as can be expected."

CHAPTER X.

OF DERIVATION.

THOSE who know Latin, Greek, Saxon, and the other languages from which our own is formed, do not require to be instructed in philological derivation; and on those who do not understand the said tongues, such instruction would be thrown away. In what manner English words are derived, one from another, the generality of persons know very well: there are, however, a few words and phrases, which it is expedient to trace to their respective sources; not only because such an exercise is of itself delightful to the inquiring mind; but because we shall thereby be furnished (as we hope to show) with a test by means of which, on hearing an expression for the first time, we shall be able, in most instances, to decide at once respecting its nature and quality.

These words, of which many have but recently come into vogue, which, though by no means improper or immoral, are absolutely unutterable in any polite assembly. It is not, at first, very easy to see what can be the objection to their use; but derivation explains it for us in the most satisfactory manner. The truth is, that the expressions in question take their origin from various trades and occupations, in which they have for the most part, a literal meaning; and we now perceive what horrible suspicions respecting one's birth, habits, and education, their figurative employment would be likely to excite. To make the matter indisputably clear, we will explain our position by a few examples.

WORDS AND PHRASES.

WHAT DERIVED FROM.

Bone (to steal,)

Butchers.

Chisel (to cheat,)

Carpenters.

To cut it fat.

Cooks.

To come it strong.

Publicans.

To drop off the hooks,

Butchers.

WORDS AND PHRASES.

WHAT DERIVED FROM.

To be done,	Cooks.
To be done brown,	Ditto.
A sell, (a cheat,)	Jews.
To lather (to beat,)	Barbers.
To strap (ditto,)	Cobblers.
To hide (ditto,)	Curriers.
Spicy (showy,)	Grocers.
To hang out (to dwell,)	Publicans.
Swamped (ruined,)	Watermen.
To put one's oar in (to interfere,)	Ditto.
Mahogany (for table,)	Upholsterers.
Dodge (trick,)	Pickpockets.
To bung up an eye,	Brewers.
To chalk down,	Publicans.
A close shaver (a miser,)	Barbers.
To be off your feed,	Ostlers.
Hold hard (stop,)	Omnibus-men.

Numerous examples, similar to the foregoing, will, no doubt, present themselves, in addition, to the mind of the enlightened student. We have not, however, quite done yet with our remarks on this division of our subject. The intrinsic vulgarity of all modes of speech which may be traced to mean or disreputable persons, will, of course, not be questioned. But—and as we have got hold of a nice bone, we may as well get all the marrow we can out of it—the principle which is now under consideration has a much wider range than is apparent at first sight.

Now we will suppose a red-hot lover addressing the goddess of his idolatry—by the way, how strange it is, that these goddesses should be always having their temples on fire, that a Queen of Hearts should ever be seated on a burning throne !—but to return to the lover: he was to say something. Well, then, let A. B. be the lover. He expresses himself thus:

“Mary, my earthly hopes are centred in you. You need not doubt me; my heart is true as the dial to the sun. Words cannot express how much I love you. Nor is my affection an ordinary feeling: it is a more exalted and a more enduring sentiment than that which bears it name. I have done. I am not eloquent: I can say no more, than that I deeply and sincerely love you.”

This, perhaps, will be regarded by connoisseurs as tolerably pathetic, and for the kind of thing not very ridiculous. Now, let A. S. S. be the lover: and let us have his version of the same story:—

“Mary, my capital in life is invested in you. You need not stick at giving me credit; my heart is as safe as the bank. The sum total of my love for you defies calculation. Nor is my attachment anything in the common way. It is a superior and more durable article than that in general wear. My stock of words is exhausted. I am no wholesale dealer in that line. All I can say is, that I have a vast fund of unadulterated affection for you.”

In this effusion the Stock Exchange, the multiplication table, and the dry goods and grocer's shops have been drawn upon for a clothing to the suitor's ideas; and by an unhappy choice of words, the most delightful and amiable feelings of our nature, without which life would be a desert and man a bear, are invested with a ridiculous disguise.

We would willingly enlarge upon the topic which we have thus slightly handled, but that we feel that we should by so doing, intrench too far on the boundaries of Rhetoric, to which science, more particularly than to Grammar, the consideration of Metaphor belongs; besides which, it is high time to have done with Etymology.

PART III.

SYNTAX.

“Now then, reader, if you are quite ready, we are.
—All right! * * * *”

The asterisks are intended to stand for a word used in speaking to horses. Don't blush, young ladies; there's not a shadow of harm in it: but as to spelling it, we are as unable to do so as the ostler's boy was, who was thrashed for his ignorance by his father.

“Where are we now, coachman?”

SYNTAX.

“The third part of Grammar, Sir, wot treats of the agreement and construction of words in a sentence.”

“Does a coachman say wot for which because he has a licence?”

“Can't say, Ma'am?”

“Drive on, coachman.”

And we must drive on, or boil on, or whatever it is the fashion to call getting on in these times.

A sentence is an aggregate of words forming a complete sense.

Sentences are of two kinds, simple and compound.

A simple sentence has in it but one subject and one finite verb; that is, a verb to which number and person belong: as, "A joke is a joke."

A compound sentence consists of two or more simple sentences connected together: as, "A joke is a joke, but a ducking is no joke. Corpulence is the attribute of swine, mayors, and oxen."

Simple sentences may be divided (if we choose to take the trouble) into the Explicative or explaining; the Interrogative, or asking; the imperative, or commanding.

An explicative sentence is, in other words, a direct assertion: as, "Sir, you are impertinent."—Johnson.

An interrogative sentence "merely asks a question:" as, "Are you a policeman? How's your Inspector?"

An imperative sentence is expressive of command, exhortation, or entreaty; as, "Shoulder arms!" "Turn out your toes!" "Charge bayonets!"

A phrase is two or more words properly put together, making either a sentence or part of a sentence: as, "Good morning!" "Your most obedient!"

Some phrases consist of two or more words improperly put together: these are improper phrases: as, "Now then, old stupid!" "Stand out of the sunshine!"

Other phrases consist of words put together by ladies: as, "A duck of a man," "A love of a shawl," "so nice," "quite refreshing," "sweetly pretty." "Did you ever?" "No I never!"

Other phrases again consist of French and English words put together by people of quality, because their knowledge of both languages is pretty nearly equal: as, "I am au désespoir," "mis hors de combat," "quite ennuyé," or rather in nine cases out of ten, "ennuyé,"—"I have a great envie" to do so and so. These constitute an important variety of comic English.

"What a duck of a man!"

If you want to know what subjects and objects are, you should go to the Morgue at Paris. But in Grammar—

The subject is the thing chiefly spoken of; the attribute is that which is affirmed or denied of it; and the object is the thing affected by such action.

The nominative denotes the subject, and usually goes before the verb or attribute ; and the word or phrase, denoting the object, follows the verb ; as, "The flirt torments her lover." Here, a flirt is the subject ; torments, the attribute or thing affirmed ; and her lover, the object.

It strikes us, though, that we are somewhat digressing from our subject, namely Syntax, which, Principally consists of two parts (which the flirt does not, for she is all body and no soul) Concord and Government.

Concord is the agreement which one word has with another, in gender, number, case or person.

Note.—That a want of agreement between words does not invalidate deeds. We apprehend that such an engagement as the following, properly authenticated, would hold good in law.

I ose Jon stubs too hunder dollar for valley reseved an promis to pay Him Nex Sattaday

Signed Willum Gibbs is X Mark

March 18, 1844.

Also that a friend of ours, to whom the following bill was sent, could not have refused to discharge it on the score of its incorrect grammar.

1835	Mr.——
Jenery 10	———	To J. Burton.
		$ cts.
Reparing of Towo Tables & Muex Stand		1 00
Aultern of 2 Blines & Toulroler . . .		0 50
(et cetera)
Newpot board Barers & seirtin &c. stapel .		1 50
Locks to Cubard dowrs & Esing do laying } down flour cloth & fiting up Top of Butt }		1 75
Fixing Lether to } & Cuting of sheters in } Dowrs in parlor } first flour }		1 20
Fixing webbin to Stand and fixing Legs to washing stule		0 38
Fiting up front of Dustbin & Cubbard on Landing altern lock of seler dowr		0 50
		<hr/>
		$6 83

Government is that power which one part of speech has over another, in directing its mood, tense, or case.

Government is also that power, of which, if the Agrarians have their way, we shall soon see very little in this country.

Hurrah!

No taxes!

No army!

No navy!

No parsons!

No lawyers!

No Congress!

No Legislature!

No anything!

No nothing!

To produce the agreement and right disposition of words in a sentence, the following rules (and observations?) should be carefully studied.

RULE I.

A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person: as "I perceive." "Thou hast been to Boston." "Apes chatter." "Frenchmen gabble."

Certain liberties are sometimes taken with this rule: as, "I own I likes good beer." "You'm a fine fellow, aint yer?" Such modes of speaking are adopted by those who neither know nor care anything about grammatical correctness: but there are other persons who care a great deal about it, but unfortunately do not know what it consists in. Such folks are very fond of saying, "How it rain!" "It fit you very well." "He say he think it very unbecoming." "I were gone before you was come," and so forth, in which forms of speech they perceive a peculiar elegance.

The infinitive mood, or part of a sentence, is sometimes used as the nominative case to the verb: as, "to be good is to be happy:" which is as grammatical an assertion as "Toby Good is Toby Happy;" and rather surpasses it in respect of sense. "That two pippins are a pair, is a proposition which no man in his senses will deny."

"To be a connoisseur in boots,
To hate all rational pursuits,
To make your money fly, as though
Gold would as fast as mushrooms grow;
To haunt the Opera, save whene'er
There's anything worth hearing there;
To smirk, to smile, to bow, to dance,
To talk of what they eat in France,
To languish, simper, sue, and sigh,
And stuff her head with flattery;
Are means to gain that worthless part,
A fashionable lady's heart."

Here are examples enough, in all conscience, of infinitive moods serving as nominative cases.

All verbs, save only in the infinitive mood or participle, require a nominative case either expressed or understood: as, "Row with me down the river," that is "Row thou, or do thou row." "Come where the aspens quiver," "come thou, or do thou come." "Fly not yet;" "fly not thou, or do not thou fly." "Pass the ruby;" "pass thou, or do thou pass the ruby" (not the Rubicon).

A well known popular song affords an example of the violation of this rule.

“Ven as the Captain comed for to hear on’t, Wery much applauded vot she’d done.”

The verb applauded has here no nominative case, whereas it ought to have been governed by the pronoun he. “He very much applauded,” &c.

Every nominative case, except when made absolute, or used, like the Latin Vocative, in addressing a person, should belong to some verb, implied if not expressed. A beautiful example of this grammatical maxim, and one, too, that explains itself, is impressed upon the mind very soon after its first introduction to letters : as,

“ Who kill’d Cock Robin ?

I said the sparrow,
With my bow and arrow ;
I kill’d Cock Robin.”

Of the neglect of this rule also, the ballad lately mentioned presents an instance : as,

“ Four-and-twenty brisk young fellows
Clad in jackets, blue array,—
And they took poor Billy Taylor
From his true love all away.”

The only verb in these four lines is the verb took, which is governed by the pronoun they. The four-and-twenty brisk young fellows, therefore, though undeniably in the nominative, have no verb to belong to : while, at the same time, whatever may be thought of their behavior to Mr. William Taylor, they are certainly not absolute in point of case.

When a verb comes between two nouns, either of which may be taken as the subject of the affirmation, it may agree with either of them : as, “ Two-and-sixpence is half-a-crown.” Due regard, however, should be paid to that noun which is most naturally the subject of the verb : it would be clearly wrong to say, “ Ducks and green peas is a delicacy.” “ Fleas is a nuisance.”

A nominative case, standing without a personal tense of a verb, and being put before a participle, independently of the rest of the sentence, is called a case absolute : as, “ My brethren, to-morrow being Sunday, I shall preach a sermon in John street ; after which we shall join in a hymn, and that having been sung, Brother Biggs will address you."

The objective case is sometimes incorrectly made absolute by showmen and others : as, "Here, gentlemen and ladies, you will see that great warrior Napoleon Bonaparte, standing agin a tree with his hands in his breeches pockets, him taking good care to keep out of harm's vay. And there, on the extreme right, you will observe the Duky Vellington a valking about amidst the red-hot cannon balls, him not caring von straw."

RULE II.

Two or more singular nouns, joined together by a copulative conjunction, expressed, or understood, are equivalent to a plural noun, and therefore require verbs, nouns, and pronouns, agreeing with them in the plural number : as, "Veal, wine, and vinegar are very good victuals I vow." "Burke and Hare were nice men." "A hat without a crown, a tattered coat, threadbare and out at elbows, a pair of breeches which looked like a piece of dirty patchwork diversified by various holes, and of boots which a Jew would hardly have raked from a kennel, at once proclaimed him a man who had seen better days."

This rule is not always adhered to in discourse quite so closely as a fastidious ear would require it to be : as, "And so, you know, Mary, and I, and Jane was a dusting the chairs, and in comes Missus."

RULE III.

When the conjunction disjunctive comes between two nouns, the verb, noun, or pronoun, is of the singular number, because it refers to each of such nouns taken separately : as, "A cold in the head, or a sore eye is a great disadvantage to a lover."

If singular pronouns, or a noun and pronoun of different persons, be disjunctively connected, the verb must agree with the person which stands nearest to it : as, "I, or thou art." "Thou or I am." "I, thou, or he is," &c. But as this way of writing or speaking is very inelegant, and as saying, "Either I am, or thou art," and so on, will always render having recourse to it unnecessary, the rule just laid down is almost useless, except inasmuch as it suggests a moral maxim, namely, "Always be on good terms with your next door neighbor."

It also forcibly reminds us of some beautiful lines by

Moore, in which the heart, like a tendril, is said to twine round the "nearest and loveliest thing." Now the person which is placed nearest the verb is the object of choice; ergo, the most agreeable person—ergo, the loveliest person or thing.

Should a conjunction disjunctive occur between a singular noun or pronoun, and a plural one, the verb agrees with the plural noun or pronoun: as, "Neither a king nor his courtiers are averse to butter:" (particularly when thickly spread.) "Darius or the Persians were hostile to Greece."

RULE IV.

A noun or multitude, that is, one which signifies many, can have a verb or Pronoun to agree with it either in the singular or plural number; according to the import of such noun, as conveying unity or plurality of idea: as, "The nation is humbugged." "The multitude have to pay many taxes." "The city Council are at a loss to know what to do." "The people is a many headed monster."

RULE V.

Pronouns agree with their antecedents, and with the nouns to which they belong, in gender and number: as, "This is the blow which killed Ned." "England was once governed by a celebrated King, who was called Rufus the Red, but whose name was by no means so illustrious as that of Alfred." "General M. and the Lieutenant had put on their boots." "The lady appeared, and she smiled, but the smile belied her feelings."

The relative being of the same person with the antecedent, the verb always agrees with it : as, "Thou who learnest Syntax." "I who enlighten thy mind."

The objective case of the personal pronouns is by some, for want of better information, employed in the place of these and those : as, "Let them things alone." "Now then, Jemes, make haste with them chops." The adverb there, is sometimes, with additional impropriety, joined to the pronoun them : as, "Look after them there sheep."

The objective case of a pronoun in the first person is put after the interjections Oh! and Ah! as, "Oh! dear me," &c. The second person, however, requires a nominative case : as, "Oh! you good-for-nothing man!" "Ah! thou gay Lothario!"

"Oh! you good-for-nothing man."

RULE VI.

When there is no nominative case between the relative and the verb, the relative itself is the nominative to the verb: as, "The master who flogged us." "The rods which were used."

But when the nominative comes between the relative and the verb, the relative exchanges, as it were, the character of sire for that of son, and becomes the governed instead of the governor; depending for its case on some word in its own member of the sentence: as, "He who is now at the head of affairs, whom the people delight to honor, and to whom is intrusted the helm of state—is a Polk.

RULE VII.

The relative and the verb, when the former is preceded by two nominatives of different persons, may agree in person with either, according to the sense: as, "I am the young gentleman who do the lovers at the Chatham;" or, "who does."

Let this maxim be borne constantly in mind. "A murderer of good characters should always be made an example of."

RULE VIII.

Every adjective, and every adjective pronoun, relates to a substantive, expressed or implied: as, "Dando was an unprincipled, as well as a voracious man." "Few quarrel with their bread and butter;" that is, "few persons." "This is the wonderful eagle of the sun." That is, "This eagle," &c.

Adjective pronouns agree in number with their substantives: "This muff, these muffs; that booby, these boobies; another numscull, other numsculls."

The young Gentleman what does the Lovers.

Some people say, "Those kind of things," or, "This four-and-twenty year," neither of which expressions they have any business to use.

Adjectives are sometimes improperly used as adverbs: as, "He behaved very bad." "He insulted me most gross." "He eat and drank uncommon." "He wur beat very severe." "It hailed tremendous," or, more commonly, "tremenjus."

RULE IX.

The article a or an agrees with nouns in the singular number only: as. "A fool, an ass. a simpleton, a nin-ny, a lout—I would not give a farthing for a thousand such.”

The definite article the may agree with nouns in the singular and plural number : as, “The toast, the ladies, the ducks.”

The articles are often properly omitted ; when used, they serve to determine or limit the thing spoken of : as, “Variety is charming.” “Familiarity doth breed contempt.” “A stitch in time saves nine.” “The heart that has truly loved never forgets.”

RULE X.

One substantive, in the possessive or genitive case, is governed by another, of a different meaning : as, “A fiddle-stick’s end.” “Monkey’s allowance.” “Virtue’s reward.”

RULE XI.

Active verbs govern the objective case : as, “I kissed her.” “She scratched me.” “Virtue rewards her followers.”

For which reason she is like a cook.

Verbs neuter do not govern an objective case. Observe, therefore, that such phrases: as, "She cried a good one," "He came the old soldier over me," and so forth, are highly improper in a grammatical point of view, to say nothing of other objections to them.

These verbs, however, are capable of governing words of a meaning similar to their own: as, in the affecting ballad of Giles Scroggins—

"I wont, she cried, and screamed a scream."

The verb To Be has the same case after it as that which goes before it: as, "It was I," not "It was me." "The Grubbs were they who eat so much tripe at our last party;" not "The Grubbses were them."

RULE XII.

One verb governs another that depends upon it, in the infinitive mood: as, "Cease to smoke pipes." "Begin to wear collars." "I advise you to shave." "I recommend you to go to church." "I resolved to visit the Carolinas."

"And there I learned to wheel about And jump Jim Crow."

In general the preposition to is used before the latter of two verbs; but sometimes it is more properly omitted: as, "I saw you take it, young fellow; come along with me." "Let me get hold of you, that's all!" "Did I hear you speak?" "I'll let you know!" "You dare not hit me." "Bid me discourse." "You need not sing."

The proposition for is sometimes unnecessarily intruded into a sentence, in addition to the preposition to, before an infinitive mood: as, How came you for to think, for to go, for to do such a thing?" Do you want me for to punch your head?"

Adjectives, substantives, and participles, often govern the infinitive mood: as, "Miss Hopkins, I shall be happy to dance the next set with you." "Oh! Sir, it is impossible to refuse you." "Have you an inclination to waltz?" "I shall be delighted in endeavoring to do so."

The infinitive mood is frequently made absolute, that is, independent of the rest of the sentence: as, "To say the truth, I was rather the worse for liquor." "Not to mince matters, Miss, I love you."

RULE XIII.

The relation which words and phrases bear to each other in point of time, should always be duly marked : instead of saying, " Last night I intended to have made strong love to her," we should say, " Last night I intended to make strong love to her ;" because, although the intention of making strong love may have been abandoned (on reflection) this morning, and is now, therefore, a thing which is past, yet it is undoubtedly, when last night and the thoughts connected with it are brought back, again present to the mind.

RULE XIV.

Participles have the same power of government with that of the verbs from which they are derived : as, " Oh, what an exquisite singer Rubini is ! I am so fond of hearing him." " Look at that horrid man ; I declare he is quizzing us !" " No, he is only taking snuff." " See, how that thing opposite keeps making mouths." " How fond they all are of wearing mustaches ! Don't you like it ?" " Oh, yes ! there is no resisting them." " Heigho ! I am dying to have an ice—" ——Young man for a husband, Miss ?

For shame, Sir ! don't be rude !

Participles are sometimes used as substantives : as, " The French mouth is adapted to the making of grimaces." " The cobbler is like the parson ; he lives by the mending of soles." " The tailor reaps a good harvest from the sewing of cloth." " Did you ever see a shoot-ing of the moon ?"

Is this what the witches mean when they sing, in the acting play of Macbeth,

“We fly by night?”

If they “shoot the moon,” they are shooting stars.

There is a mode of using the indefinite article a before a participle, for which there is no occasion, as it does not convert the participle into a substantive, and makes no alteration in the sense of what is said; in this case the article, therefore, is like a wart, a wen, or a knob at the end of the nose, neither useful nor ornamental: as, “Going out a shooting.” “Are you a coming to-morrow?” “I was a thinking about what Jem said.” “Here you are, a going of it, as usual!”

A liberty not unfrequently taken with the English Language, is the substitution of the perfect participle for the imperfect tense, and of the imperfect tense for the perfect participle: as, “He run like mad, with the great dog after him.” “Maria come and told us all about it.” “When I had wrote the Valentine, I sealed it with my thimble.” “He has rose to (be) a common-councilman.” “I was chose Lord Mayor.” “I’ve eat (or a eat) lots of vension in my time.” “I should have spoke if you hadn’t put in your oar.” “You were mistook.” “He sent her an affecting copy of verses, which was wrote with a Perryian pen.”

RULE XV.

Adverbs are generally placed in a sentence before adjectives, after verbs active or neuter, and frequently between the auxiliary and the verb: as, “He came, Sir, and he was most exceedingly drunk; he could hardly stand upon his legs; he made a very lame discourse; he spoke incoherently and ridiculously; and was impatiently heard by the whole assembly.” “He is fashionably dressed.” “She is conspicuously ugly.” “The eye of jealousy is proverbially sharp, and yet it is indisputably green." "The French Marquis was a very charming man; he danced exquisitely and nimbly, and was greatly admired by all the ladies."

Several adverbs have been coined of late; and some of them are very remarkable for a "particular" elegance: as, "I reckon you're catwampously chawed up."

In the example just given there is to be found, besides the new adverb, a word which, if not also new to the English student, is rendered so both by its orthography and pronunciation; namely, chawed. This term is no other than “chewed,” modified. “Chawed up” is a very strong expression, and is employed to signify the most complete state of discomfiture and defeat, when a man is as much crushed, mashed, and comminuted, morally speaking, as if he had literally and corporeally undergone the process of mastication. “Catawampously” is a concentration of “hopelessly,” “tremendously,” “thoroughly,” and “irrevocably;” so that “catawampously chawed up,” means, brought as nearly to a state of utter annihilation as anything consistently with the laws of nature can possibly be. For the metaphorical use of the word “chawed,” three several reasons have been given: 1. Familiarity with the manner in which the alligator disposes of his victims. 2. The cannibalism of the Aborigines. 3. The delicate practice of chewing tobacco. Each of these is supported by numerous arguments, on the consideration of which it would be quite out of the question to enter in this place.

RULE XVI.

Two English negatives (like French lovers) destroy one another,—and become equivalent to an affirmative: as, “The question before the House was not an unimportant one;” that is, “it was an important one.” “Mr. Brown was free to confess that he did not undertake to say that he would not on some future occasion give a satisfactory answer to the honorable gentleman.”

Thus, at one and the same time, we teach our readers Syntax and secretiveness.

It is probable that small boys are often unacquainted with this rule ; for many of them, while undergoing personal chastisement, exclaim, for the purpose, as it would appear, of causing its duration to be shortened —“Oh pray, Sir, oh pray, Sir, oh pray, Sir! I won't do so no more!”

RULE XVII.

Prepositions govern the objective case: as, “What did the butcher say of her?” “He said that she would never do for him ; that she was too thin for a wife, and he was not fond of a spare rib.”

The delicate ear is much offended by any deviation from this rule: as, in a shocking and vulgar song which it was once our misfortune to hear:—

“There I found the faithless she Frying sausages for he.”

We had occasion, in the Etymology, to remark on a certain misuse of the preposition, of. This, perhaps, is best explained by stating that of, in the instances cited, is made to usurp the government of cases which are already under a rightful jurisdiction: as, “What are you got a eating of?” “He had been a beating of his wife.”

RULE XVIII.

Conjunctions connect similar moods and tenses of verbs, and cases of nouns and pronouns: as, “A coat of arms suspended on a wall is like an executed traitor; it is hanged, drawn, and quartered.” “If you continue thus to drink brandy and water and to smoke cigars, you will be like Boreas the North wind, who takes ‘cold without’ wherever he goes, and always ‘blows a cloud’ when it comes in his way.” “Do you think there is any thing between him and her?" "Yes; he and she are engaged ones."

Note.—To ask whether there is any thing between two persons of opposite sexes, is one way of inquiring whether they are in love with each other. It is not, however, in our opinion, a very happy phrase, inasmuch as whatever intervenes between a couple of fond hearts, must tend to prevent them from coming together.

RULE XIX.

Some conjunctions govern the indicative; some the subjunctive mood. In general, it is right to use the subjunctive, when contingency or doubt is implied: as, "If I were to say that the moon is made of green cheese." "If I were a wiseacre." "If I were a Wiltshire-man." "A lady, unless she be toasted, is never drunk."

And when she is toasted, those who are drunk are generally the gentlemen.

"The Ladies!"

Those conjunctions which have a positive and absolute signification, require the indicative mood: as, "He who fasts may be compared to a horse: for as the animal eats not a bit, so neither does the man partake of a morsel." "The rustic is deluded by false hopes, for his daily food is gammon."

Every philosopher has his weak points, and in the Sylva Sylvarum may be found some gammon of Bacon:

RULE XX.

When a comparison is made between two or more things, the latter noun or pronoun is not governed by, the conjunction than or as, but agrees with the verb, or is governed by the verb or preposition, expressed or understood: as, "The French are a lighter people than we," (that is "than we are,") "and yet we are not so dark as they," that is, "as they are." "I should think that they admire me more than them," that is, "than they admire them." "It is a shame, Martha! you were thinking more of that young officer than me," that is, "of me."

Sufficient attention is not always paid, in discourse, to this rule. Thus, a schoolboy may be often heard to exclaim, "What did you hit me for, you great fool?

you're bigger than me. Hit some one of your own size!" "Not fling farther than him? just can't I, that's all!" "You and I have got more marbles than them."

RULE XXI.

An ellipsis, or omission of certain words, is frequently allowed, for the sake of avoiding disagreeable repetitions, and of expressing our ideas in a few words. Instead of saying, "She was a little woman, she was a round woman, and she was an old woman," we say, making use of the figure Ellipsis, "She was a little, round, and old woman."

When, however, the omission of words is productive of obscurity, weakens the sentence, or involves a violation of some grammatical principle, the ellipsis must not be used. It is improper to say, "Puddings fill who fill them;" we should supply the word those. "A beautiful leg of mutton and turnips" is not good language: those who would deserve what they are talking about ought to say, "A beautiful leg of mutton and fine turnips."

In common discourse, in which the meaning can be eked out by gestures, signs, and inarticulate sounds variously modified, the ellipsis is much more liberally and more extensively employed than in written composition. "May I have the pleasure of—hum? ha?" may constitute an invitation to take wine. "I shall be quite—a—a—" may serve as an answer in the affirmative. "So then you see he was—eh!—you see—," is perhaps an intimation that a man has been hanged. "Well, of all the—I never!" is often tantamount to three times as many words expressive of surprise, approbation, or disapprobation, according to the tone in which it is uttered. "Will you?—ah!—will you?—ah!—ah!—ah!" will do either for "Will you be so impertinent. you scoundrel? will you dare to do so another time?" or, "Will you, dearest, loveliest, most adorable of your sex, will you consent to make me happy; will you be mine? speak! answer, I entreat you! One word from those sweet lips will make me the most fortunate man in existence!"

There is, however, a kind of ellipsis which those who indulge in that style of epistolary writing, wherein sentiments of a tender nature are conveyed, will do well to avoid with the greatest care. The ellipsis alluded to, is that of the first person singular of the personal pronoun, as instanced in the following model of a billet-doux:—

Camberwell,
April 1, 1844.

MY DEAREST FANNY,

Have not enjoyed the balm of sleep all the live-long night. Encountered, last night, at the ball, the beau ideal of my heart. Never knew what love was till then. Derided the sentiment often; jested at scars, because had never felt a wound. Feel at last the power of beauty—Write with a tremulous hand; waver between hope and fear. Hope to be thought not altogether unworthy of regard: fear to be rejected as having no pretensions to the affections of such unparalleled loveliness. Know not in what terms to declare my feelings. Adore you, worship you, dote on you, am wrapt up in you! think but on you, live but for you, would willingly die for you!—in short, love you! and imploring you to have some compassion on one who is distracted for your sake

Remain

Devotedly yours

T. TOUT.

RULE XXII.

A Regular and dependent construction should be carefully preserved throughout the whole of a sentence, and all its parts should correspond to each other. There is, therefore, an inaccuracy in the following sentence ; "Greenacre was more admired, but not so much lamented, as Burke." It should be, "Greenacre was more admired than Burke, but not so much lamented."

Of these two worthies there will be a notice of the following kind in a biographical dictionary, to be published a thousand years hence in America.

GREENACRE.—A celebrated eritie who so cut up a blue-stockng lady of the name of Brown, that he did not leave her a leg to stand upon.

BURKE.—A famous orator, whose power of stopping people's mouths was said to be prodigious. It is farther reported of him that he was only once hung up, and that on the oecasion of the last speech he ever made.

Perhaps it may be said that the rule last stated comprehends all preceding rules and requires exemplification accordingly. We therefore call the attention of the reader to the following paragraph, requesting him to consider what, and how many, violations of the maxims of Syntax it contains.

"We teaches, that is, my son and me teaches, the boys English Grammar. Tom or Diek have learned something every day but Harry what is idler, whom I am sure will never come to no good, for he is always a miching and doing those kind of things (he was catch but yesterday in a skittle grounds) he only makes his book all dog's ears. I beat he, too, pretty smartish, as I ought, you will say, for te have did. I was going to have sent him away last week but he somehow got over me as he do always. I have had so much trouble with he, that between you and I, if I was not paid for it, I wouldn't have no more to do with such a boy. There never wasn't a monkey more mischievious than him; and a donkey isn't more stupider and not half so obstinate as that youngster."

The Syntax of the Interjection has been sufficiently stated under Rule V. Interjections afford more matter for consideration in a Treatise on Elocution than they do in a work on Grammar; but there is one observation which we are desirous of making respecting them, and which will not, it is hoped, be thought altogether foreign to our present subject. Almost every interjection has a great variety of meanings, adapted to particular occasions and circumstances, and indicated chiefly by the tone of the voice. Of this proposition we shall now give a few illustrations, which we would endeavor to render still clearer by the addition of musical notes, but that these would hardly express, with adequate exactness, the modulations of sound to which we allude; and besides, we hope to be sufficiently understood without such help. This part of the Grammar should be read aloud by the student; or, which is better still, the interjection, where it is possible, should be repeated with the proper intonation by a class; the sentence which gives occasion to it being read by the preceptor. We will select the interjection Oh! as the source from which our examples are to be drawn.

"I'll give it to you, you idle dog: I will!"

"Oh, pray, Sir! Oh, pray, Sir! Oh! Oh! Oh!"

"I shall ever have the highest esteem for you, Sir; but as to love, that is out of the question."

"Oh, Matilda!"

"I say, Jim, look at that chaffinch: there's a shy!"

"Oh, Crikey!"

"Miss Timms, do you admire Lord Byron?"

"Oh, yes!"

"What do you think of Rubini's singing?"

"Oh!"

"So then, you see, we popped round the corner, and caught them just in the nick of time."

"Oh!"

"Sir, your behavior has done you great credit."

"Oh!"

"Oats are looking up."

"Oh!"

"Honorable Members might say what they pleased; but he was convinced, for his part, that the New Poor Law had given great general satisfaction."

"Oh! oh!"

There being now no reason (or rule) to detain us in the Syntax, we shall forthwith advance into Prosody, where we shall have something to say, not only about rules, but also of measures.

PART IV.

PROSODY.

PROSODY consists of two parts ; wherefore, although it may be a topic, a head, or subject for discussion, it can never be a point ; for a point is that which hath no parts. Besides, there are a great many lines to be considered in the second part of Prosody, which treats of Versification. The first division teaches the true Pronunciation of Words, including Accent, Quantity, Emphasis, Pause, and Tone.

Lord Chesterfield's book about manners, which is intended to teach us the proper tone to be adopted in Society, may be termed an Ethical Prosody.

Lord Chesterfield may have been a polished gentleman, but Dr. Johnson was of the two the more shining character.

CHAPTER I.

OF PRONUNCIATION.

SECTION I.

OF ACCENT.

THOUGH penetrated ourselves by the desire of imparting instruction, we are far from wishing to bore our readers ; and therefore we shall endeavor to repeat nothing here that we have said before.

Accent is the marking with a peculiar stress of the voice a particular letter or syllable in a word, in such a manner as to render it more distinct or audible than the rest. Thus, in the word théatre, the stress of the voice should be on the letter e and first syllable the ; and in contrary, on the first syllable con. How shocking it is to hear people say con-tráry, the-átre ! The friends of education will be reminded with regret, that an error in the pronunciation of the first of these words is very early impressed on the human mind.

“ Mary, Mary,
Quite contráry,
How does your garden grow ? ”

How many evils, alas ! arise from juvenile associations !

Words of two syllables never have more than one of them accented, except for the sake of peculiar emphasis. Gentlemen, however, whose profession it is to drive certain public vehicles called cabs, are much accustomed to disregard this rule, and to say, “ pó-lite ” (or “ púr-lite ”), “ gén-téel,” “ cón-cérn,” “ pó-lice,” and so on : nay, they go so far as to convert a word of one syllable into two, for the sake of indulging in this style of pronunciation ; and thus the word “ queer ” is pronounced by them as “ ké-véer.”

The word “ á-mén,” when standing alone, should be pronounced with two accents.

The accents in which it usually is pronounced are very inelegant. Clerks, now-a-days, alas ! are no scholars.

Dissyllables, formed by adding a termination, usually have the former syllable accented : as, “ Fóolish, blóck-head,” &c.

The accent in dissyllables, formed by prefixing a syllable to the radical word, is commonly on the latter syllable: as, “I protést, I decláre, I entréat, I adóre, I expíre.”

ALL FOR LOVE.

Protestations, declarations, entreaties, and adorations, proclaim a swain to be simply tender; but expiration (for love) proves him to be decidedly soft.

A man who turns lover becomes a protest-ant; and his conduct at the same time generally undergoes a reformation, especially if he has previously been a rake.

The zeal, however, of a reformed rake, like that of Jack in Dean Swift's “Tale of a Tub,” is sometimes apt to outrun his discretion.

When the same word, being a dissyllable, is both a noun and a verb, the verb has mostly the accent on the latter, and the noun on the former syllable: as,

“Molly, let Hymen’s gentle hand
Cément our hearts together,
With such a cément as shall stand
In spite of wind and weather.

“I do présage—and oft a fact
A présage doth foretoken—
Our mutual love shall ne’er contráct,
Our cóntract ne’er be broken.”

There are many exceptions to the rule just enunciated (so that, correctly as well as familiarly speaking, it is perhaps no rule;) for though verbs seldom have an aceent on the former, yet nouns frequently have it on the latter syllable: as,

“Mary Anne is my delight
Both by day and eke by night;
For by day her soft contról
Soothes my heart and calms my soul;
And her image while I doze
Comes to sweeten my repóse;
Fortune favoring my desígn,
Please the pigs she shall be mine!”

The former syllable of most dissyllables ending in y, our, ow, le, ish, ck, ter, age, en, et, is accented: as, “Gránny, noódle,” &c.

Except allów, avów, endów, bestów, belów.

“Sir I cannot allów
You your flame to avów;
Endów yourself first with the rhino:
My hand to bestów
On a fellow belów

Me!—I'd rather be—never mind—
I know."

"Music," in the language of the Gods, is sometimes pronounced "mú-síc!"

Nouns of two syllables ending in er, have the accent on the former syllable: as, "Búcher, báker."

It is, perhaps, a singular thing, that persons who pursue the callings denoted by the two words selected as examples, should always indicate their presence at an area by crying out, in direct defiance of Prosody, "But-chér, ba-kér;" the latter syllable being of the two the more strongly accented.

Dissyllabic verbs ending in a consonant and e final, as "Disclose," "repine," or having a diphthong in the last syllable, as, "Believe," "deceive," or ending in two consonants, as "Intend," are accented on the latter syllable.

"Matilda's eyes a light disclóse,
Which with the star of Eve might vie;
Oh! that such lovely orbs as those
Should sparkle at an apple-pie!

"Thy love I thought was wholly mine,
Thy heart I fondly-hoped to rule;
Its throne I cannot but repíne
At sharing with a goosb'ry fool!

"Thou swear'st no flatterer can decéive
Thy mind,—thy breast no coxcomb régle;
Thou art no trifier, I belíeve,
But why so plaguy fond of trifle?

"Why, when we're wed—I don't inténd
To joke, Matilda, or be funny;

I really fear that you will spend
 'The Honey Moon in eating honey !"

Most dissyllabic nouns, having a diphthong in the latter syllable, have the accent also on that syllable : as,

"A Hamlet that draws
 Is sure of appláuse."

A Hamlet that draws ? There are not many who can give even an outline of the character.

In a few words ending in ain the accent is placed on the former syllable : as, "Villain," which is pronounced as the natives of Whitechapel pronounce "willing."

Those dissyllables, the vowels of which are separated in pronunciation, always have the accent on the first syllable : as, lion, scion, &c.

When is a young and tender shoot
 Like a fond swain ? When 'tis a scion.
 What's the most gentlemanly brute
 Like, of all flow'rs ? A dandy lion.'

Trisyllables, formed by adding a termination or prefixing a syllable, retain the accent of the radical word : as, "Lóveliness, shéepishness, knávery, assúrance."

The first syllable of trisyllables ending in ons, al, ion, is accented in the generality of cases : as in the words "sérious, cápital," &c.

"Dr. Johnson declared, with a sérious face,
 That he reckoned a punster a villain :
 What would he have thought of the horrible case
 Of a man who makes jokes that are killing ?

"In his diction to speak 'tis not easy for one
 Who must furnish both reason and rhyme :

“Sir, the rogue who has utter’d a cápital pun,
Has committed a cápital crime.”

Trisyllables ending in ce, ent, ate, y, re, le, and ude, commonly accent the first syllable. Many of those, however, which are derived from words having the accent on the last syllable and of those of which the middle syllable has a vowel between two consonants, are excepted.

They who would elegantly speak
Should not say “ímpudence,” but “check ;”
Should all things éatable call “prog ;”
Eyes “ogles,” cóuntenance “phisog.”
A coach should nóminate a “drag,”
And spécify as “moke,” a nag :
For écellent, use “prime” or “bang up,”
Or “out and out ;” and “scrag,” for hang up.
The théâtre was wont to teach
The public réctitude of speech,
But we who live in modern age
Consult the gallery, not the stage.

Trisyllables ending in ator have the accent placed on the middle syllable ; as, “Spectátor, narrátor,” &c. except órator, sénator, and a few other words.

Take care that you never pronounce the common name of the vegetable sometimes called Irish fruit, “purtátor.”

A diphthong in the middle syllable of a trisyllable is accented : as also, in general, is a vowel before two consonants : as, “Doméstic,” “endéavor.”

An endeavor to appear domesticated, or in common phrasology, to “do” the domestic, is sometimes made by young gentlemen, and generally with but an ill grace. Avoid such attempts, reader, on all occasions: and in particular never adventure either to nurse babies, or (when you shall have "gone up to the ladies") to pour water into the tea-pot from the kettle. A legal or medical student sometimes thinks proper, from a desire of appearing at once gallant and facetious, to usurp the office of pouring out the tea itself, on which occasions he is very apt to betray his uncivilised habits by an unconscious but very unequivocal manipulation used in giving malt liquor what is technically termed a "head."

Many polysyllables are regulated as to accent by the words from which they are derived: as, "Inex-préssibles, Súbstituted, Unobjéctionably, Désignated, Transatlántic, Délicacy, Decidedly, Unquéstionable."

Words ending in ator are commonly accented on the last syllable but one, let them be as long as they may: as, respirátor, regulátor, renovátor, indicátor, and all the other ators shat we see in the newspapers.

Many words ending in ion, ous, ty, ia, io, and cal, have their accent on the last syllable but two: as, "Con-si-de-rá-ti-on, pro-dí-gi-ous, im-pe-ne-tra-bíl-i-ty, en-cy-clo-pæ'-di-a, brag-ga-dó-ci-o, an-ti-mo-nárch-i-cal," all of which words we have divided into syllables, by way of a hint that they are to be pronounced (comically speaking) after the manner of Dominie Sampson.

Words that end in le usually have the accent on the first syllable: as, "A'micable, déspicable," &c.: although we have heard people say "despíicable." "I never see such a despíicable fellow, not in all my born days."

Words of this class, however, the second syllable of which has a vowel before two consonants, are often differently accented: as in "Respéctable, contémp-nble."

"A respectable Man."

Having, in compliance with grammatical usage, laid down certain rules with regard to accent, we have to inform the reader that there are so many exceptions to almost all of them, that perhaps there is scarcely one which it is worth while to attend to. We hope we have in some measure amused him; but as to instruction, we fear that, in this part of our subject, we have given him very little of that. Those who would acquire a correct accent had better attend particularly to the mode of speaking adopted in good society; avoid debating clubs; and go to church. For farther satisfaction and information we refer them, and we beg to say that we are not joking—to Walker.

SECTION II.

OF QUANTITY.

THE quantity of a syllable means the time taken up in pronouncing it. As there is in Arithmetic a long division and a short division, so in Prosody is Quantity considered as long or short.

A syllable is said to be long, when the accent is on the vowel, causing it to be slowly joined in pronunciation to the next letter: as, “Flēa, smäll, crēature.”

A syllable is called short, when the accent lies on the consonant, so that the vowel is quickly joined to the succeeding letter: as “Cräck, lĭttle, dēvil.”

The pronunciation of a long syllable commonly occupies double the time of a short one: thus, “Pate,” and “Brōke,” must be pronounced as slowly again as “Păt,” and “Knöck.”

We have remarked a curious tendency in the more youthful students of Grammar to regard the quantity of words (in their lessons) more as being “small” or “great” than as coming under the head of “long” or “short.” Their predilection for small quantities of words is very striking and peculiar; food for the mind they seem to look upon as physic; and all physic, in their estimation, is most agreeably taken in infinitesimal doses. The Homœopathic system of acquiring knowledge is more to their taste than even the Hamiltonian.

It is quite impossible to give any rules as to quantity worth reading. The Romans may have submitted to them, but that is no reason why we should. We will pronounce our words as we please: and if foreigners want to know why, we will tell them that, when there is no law to the contrary, we always does as we likes with our own.

SECTION III.

OF EMPHASIS.

EMPHASIS is the distinguishing of some word or words in a sentence, on which we wish to lay particular stress, by a stronger and fuller sound, and sometimes by a particular tone of the voice.

A few illustrations of the importance of emphasis will be, perhaps, both agreeable and useful.

When a young lady says to a young gentlemen, "You are a nice fellow ; you are !"—she means one thing.

When a young gentleman, addressing one of his own sex, remarks, "You're a nice fellow ; you are ;"—he means another thing.

"Your friend is a gentlemen," pronounced without any particular emphasis, is the simple assertion of a fact.

"Your friend is a gentleman," with the emphasis on the words "friend" and "gentleman," conveys an insinuation besides.

So simple a question as "Do you like pine-apple rum?" is susceptible of as many meanings as there are words in it ; according to the position of the emphasis.

"Do you like pine-apple rum?" is as much as to say, "Do you, though, really like pine-apple rum?"

"Do you like pine-apple rum?" is tantamount to, "Can it be that a young gentleman (or lady) like you, can like pine-apple rum?"

"Do you like pine-apple rum?" means, "Is it possible that instead of disliking, you are fond of pine-apple rum?"

“Do you like pine-apple rum?” is an enquiry as to whether you like that kind of rum in particular.

And lastly, “Do you like pine-apple rum?” is equivalent to asking if you think that the flavor of the pineapple improves that especial form of alcohol.

A well-known instance of an emphasis improperly placed was furnished by a certain Parson, who read a passage in the Old Testament in the following unlucky manner: “And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass; and they saddled him.”

Young ladies are usually very emphatic in ordinary discourse. “What a little dear! Oh! how sweetly pretty! Well! I never did, I declare! So nice, and so innocent, and so good-tempered, and so affectionate, and such a color! And oh! such lovely eyes! and such hair! He was a little duck! he was, he was, he was. Tzig a tzig, tzig, tzig, tzig, tzig!” &c. &c. &c.

This emphatic way of speaking is indicative of two very amiable feelings implanted by nature in the female occiput, and called by the Phrenologists Adhesiveness and Philoprogenitiveness. Those who attempt to imitate it will be conscious, while forcing out their words, of a peculiar mental motion, which we cannot explain otherwise than by saying, that it is analogous to that which attends the act of pressing or squeezing; as when, with the thumb of the right hand, we knead one lump of putty to another, in the palm of the left. Perhaps we might also instance, sucking an orange. In all these cases, the organ of Weight, according to Phrenology, is also active; and this, perhaps, is one of the faculties which induce young ladies to lay a stress upon their words. Nevertheless, we fear that a damsel would hardly be pleased by being told that her weight was considerable, though it would, at the same time, grievously offend her to accuse her of lightness. Here we need scarcely observe, that we refer to lightness, not of complexion, but of sentiment, which is always regarded as a dark shade in the character. This defect, we think, we may safely assert, will never be observed in emphatic fair ones.

But we have not quite yet exhausted the subject of emphasis, considered in relation to young ladies. Their letters are as emphatic as their language is, almost every third word being underlined. Such epistles, inasmuch as they are addressed to the heart, ought not to be submitted to the ear; nevertheless we must say that we have occasionally been wicked and waggish enough to read them aloud—to ourselves alone, of course. The reader may, if he choose, follow our example. We subjoin a specimen of female correspondence, endeared to us by many tender recollections, and admirably adapted to our present purpose.

My dear Paul,

When we left Town on Wednesday last the weather was so very rainy that we were obliged to have the coach windows up. I was terribly afraid that Matilda and I would have caught our Death of cold; but thank Goodness no such untoward event took place. It was very uncomfortable and I so wished you had been there. When we got home who do you think was there? Mr. Sims; and he said he thought that I was so much grown. Only think. And so then you know we took some refreshment, for I assure you, what with the journey and altogether we were very nearly famished; and we were all invited to go to the Chubbs' that Evening to a small Tea Party, for which I must own I thought Mr. Chubb a nice man. After tea we had a carpet waltz, and although I was very tired I enjoyed it much. There were some very pretty girls there, and one or two agreeable young men; but oh! &c.

The remainder of this letter being of a nature personally interesting to ourselves only, and likely, in the opinion of some readers, to render its insertion attributable to motives of vanity, we shall not be found fault with for objecting to transcribe any more of it.

SECTION IV.

OF PAUSES.

A Pause, otherwise called a rest, is an absolute cessation of the voice, in speaking or reading, during a perceptible interval, longer or shorter, of time.

Comic Pauses often occur in Oratory. "Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking," is usually followed by a pause of this sort. A young gentleman, his health having been drunk at a party, afforded, in endeavoring to return thanks, a signal illustration of the Pause Comic. "Gentlemen," he began, "the Ancient Romans,"—(A pause,)—"gentlemen, the Ancient Romans,"—(Hear!)"—"The Ancient Romans, Gentlemen,"—(Bravo! hear! hear!)"—"Gentlemen—that is—the Ancient Romans"—"were very fine fellows, Jack, I dare say," added a friend, pulling the speaker down by the coat-tail.

That notable Ancient Roman, Brutus, is represented by Shakspeare as making a glorious pause: as "Whose here so vile that would not love his country? If any, speak, for him have I offended. I pause for a reply."

Here of course, Brutus pauses, folds his arms, and looks magnanimous. We have heard, though, of an idle and impudent schoolboy, who, at a public recitation, when he had uttered the words "I pause for a reply," gravely took out his penknife and began paring his nails.

This was minding his paws with a vengeance.

SECTION V.

OF TONES.

Tones consist of the modulations of the voice, or the notes or variations of sound which we use in speaking: thus differing materially both from emphasis, and pauses.

An interesting diversity of tones is exhibited by the popular voice at an election.

Also by charcoal-men, milk-men, and chimney-sweepers; and by fruit-sellers, and news-boys.

We cannot exactly write tones (though it is easy enough to write notes,) but we shall nevertheless endeavor to give some idea of their utility.

Observe, that two doves billing resemble two magistrates bowing;—because they are beak to beak.

A lover and a police-magistrate (unless the two characters should chance to be combined, which sometimes happens, that is, when the latter is a lover of justice) would say, "Answer me," in very different tones.

A lover again would utter the words "For ever and ever," in a very different tone from that in which a minister would repeat them.

A young lady, on her first introduction to you, says, "Sir," in a tone very unlike that in which she sometime afterwards delivers herself of the same monosyllable when she is addressing you under the influence of jealousy.

As to the word "Sir," the number of constructions which, according to the tone in which it is spoken, it may be made to bear, are incalculable. We may adduce a few instances.

"Please, Sir, let me off."

"No, Sir!"

"Waiter! you, Sir."

"Yes, Sir! yes, Sir!"

"Sir, I am greatly obliged to you."

"Sir, you are quite welcome."

"Your servant, Sir" (by a man who brings you a challenge.)

"'Servant, Sir" (by a tailor bowing you to the door.)

"Sir, you are a gentleman!"

"Sir, you are a scoundrel!"

We need not go on with examples ad infinitum. If after what we have said anybody does not understand the nature of Tone, all we shall say of him is, that he is a Tony Lumpkin.

CHAPTER II.

OF VERSIFICATION.

It is with peculiar pleasure that we approach this part of Prosody. We belong to a class of persons to whom a celebrated phrenological manipulator ascribes "some poetical feeling, if studied or called forth;" and, to borrow another expression from the same quarter, we sometimes "versify a little;" that is to say, we diversify our literary occupations by an occasional flirtation with the muses.

We have a great respect for the memory of our old schoolmaster; notwithstanding which, we think we can beat him (which, we shall be told by the wags, would be tit for tat) at poet-making, though, indeed, he was a magician in his way. "I'll make thee a poet, my boy," he used to say, "or the rod shall."

Let us try what we can do.

A verse consists of a certain number and variety of syllables, put together and arranged according to certain laws.

Verses being also called dulcet strains, harmonious numbers, tuneful lays, and so forth, it is clear that such combination and arrangement must be so made as to please the ear.

Versification is the making of verses. This seems such a truism as to be not worth stating; but it is necessary to define what Versification is, because many people suppose it to be the same thing with poetry. We will prove that it is not.

"Much business in the Funds has lately been Transacted various monied men between;
Though speculation early in the week

Went slowly ; nought was done whereof to speak.
 The largest operations, it was found,
 Were twenty-five and fifty thousand pound."

We might proceed in the same strain, but we have already done half a dozen lines without a particle of poetry in them ; and we do not wish to overwhelm people with proof of what a great many will take upon trust.

Every fool knows what Rhyme is ; so we need not say anything about that.

OF POETICAL FEET.

Poetical feet ! Why, Fanny Elsler's feet and Taglioni's feet are poetical feet—are they not ? or else what is meant by calling dancing the poetry of Motion ? And cannot each of those artistes boast of a toe which is the very essence of all poetry—a 'TO' KAAO'N ?

No. You may make verses on Taglioni's feet, (though if she be a poetess, she can do that better than you, standing, too, on one leg, like the man that Horace speaks of ;) but you cannot make them of her feet. Feet of which verses are composed are made of syllables, not of bones, muscles, and ligaments. Feet and pauses are the constituent parts of a verse.

We have heard one boy ask of another, who was singing, "How much is that a yard ?" still the yard is not a poetical measure.

The feet which are used in poetry consist either of two or three syllables. There are four kinds of feet of two, and an equal number of three syllables. Four and four are eight : therefore Pegasus is an octoped ; and if our readers do not understand this logic, we are sorry for it. But as touching the feet—we have

1. The Trochee, which has the first syllable accented, and the last unaccented : as, “Yānkēe dōodlē.”

2. The Iambus, which has the first syllable unaccented, and the last accented : as, “Thē māid hērsēlf with rōuge, ālās ! bēdaūbs.”

3. The Spondee, which has both the words or syllables accented : as, “āl hāil, grēat kīng, Tōm Thūmb, āl hail !”

4. The Pyrrhic, which has both the words or syllables unaccented : as, “ōn thē tree-top.”

5. The Dactyl, which has the first syllable accented and the two latter unaccented : as, “Jōnāthān, Jēffēr-sōn.”

6. The Amphibrach has the first and last syllables unaccented and the middle one accented : as, “Oē’r-whēlmīng; trānsportēd, ēcstātīc, dēlightfūl, āccēptēd, ādrēssēs.”

7. The Anapæst (or as we used to say, Nasty-beast) has the two first syllables unaccented and the last accented : as, “ōvērgrōwn grēnādiēr.”

8. The Tribrach has all its syllables unaccented : as, “Matrīmōnŷ, exquīsitenēss.”

These feet are divided into principal feet, out of which pieces of poetry may be wholly or chiefly formed ; and secondary feet, the use of which is to diversify the number and improve the verse.

We shall now proceed to explain the nature of the principal feet.

Iambic verses are of several kinds, each kind consisting of a certain number of feet or syllables.

1. The shortest form of the English Iambic consists of an Iambus, with an additional short syllable thus coinciding with the Amphibrach : as,

"Whāt Sūsān,
 My beauty!
 Refuse one
 So true t' ye?
 This ditty
 Of sadness
 Begs pity
 For madness."

2. The second form of the English Iambic consists of two Iambuses, and sometimes takes an additional short syllable : as,

"Mǝ ēye, whāt fūn.
 With dog and gun,
 And song and shout,
 To roam about!
 And shoot our snipes!
 And smoke our pipes!
 Or eat at ease,
 Beneath the trees,
 Our bread and cheese!
 To rouse the hare
 From gloomy lair;
 To scale the mountain
 And ford the fountain,
 While rustics wonder
 To hear our thunder."

3. The third form consists of three Iambuses: as in the following morceau, the author of which is, we regret to say, unknown to us; though we did once hear somebody say that it was Mr. Anon.

"Jäck Sprätt ĕat āll thē fāt,
 His wife eat all the lean,

And so between them both,
They lick'd the platter clean."

In this verse an additional short syllable is also admitted : as,

"Ālēxīs yōūthfūl ploūgh-bōy,
A Shepherdess adored,
Who loved fat Hodge, the cow-boy, -
So t'other chap was floored."

4. The fourth form is made up of four Iambuses : as,

"Ādieū mý bōots, cōmpāniōns ōld,
New footed twīce, and four times soled ;
My footsteps ye have guarded long,
Life's brambles, thorns, and flints among ;
And now you're past the cobbler's art,
And fate declares that we must part.
Ah me ! what cordial can restore
The gaping patch repatch'd before ?
What healing art renew the weal
Of subject so infirm of heel ?
What potion, pill, or draught control
So deep an ulcer of the sole ?

5. The fifth species of English Iambic consists of five Iambuses : as,

"Cōme, Trāgic Mūse, īn tāttēr'd vēst ārrāy'd,
And while through blood, and mud, and crimes I wade,
Support my steps, and this, my strain, inspire
With Horror's blackest thoughts and bluest fire !"

The Epic of which the above example is the opening, will perhaps appear hereafter. This kind of Iambic constitutes what is called the heroic measure :—of which we shall have more to say by and by ; but shall only remark at present that it, in common with most of the ordinary English measures, is susceptible of many varieties, by the admission of other feet, as Trochees, Dactyls, Anapæsts, &c.

6. Our Iambic in its sixth form, is commonly called the Alexandrine measure. It consists of six Iambuses: as,

“His wōrshīp gāve thē wōrd, ānd Snōoks wās bōrne āwāy.”

The Alexandrine is sometimes introduced into heroic rhyme, and when used, as the late Mr. John Reeve was wont to say, “with a little moderation,” occasions an agreeable variety. Thus the example quoted is preceded by the following lines:—

“What! found at midnight with a darkey, lit,
A bull-dog, jemmy, screw, and centre-bit
And tongueless of his aim? It cannot be
But he was bent, at least, on felony;
He stands remanded. ‘Ho! Policeman A!’
His worship gave the word, and Snooks was borne away.”

7. The seventh and last form of our Iambic measure is made up of seven Iambuses. This species of verse has been immortalised by the adoption of those eminent hands, Messrs. Sternhold and Hopkins. It runs thus:—

Goōd peōplē āll, Ĩ prāy drāw nēar, fōr yōu Ĩ nēeds mūst tēll,
That William Brown is dead and gone; the man you knew full well.
A broad-brimm’d hat, black breeches, and an old Welch wig he wore:

And now and then a long brown coat all button'd up before."

The present measure is as admirably adapted for the Platform as for the Conventicle.

"My name it is Bill Scroggins, and my fate it is to die,

For I was at the Sessions tried and cast for felony.

My friends, to these my dying words I pray attention lend,

The public-house has brought me unto this untimely end."

Verses of this kind are now usually broken into two lines, with four feet in the first line, and three in the second : as,

"I wish I wēre ā littlē pig
To wallow in the mire,
To eat, and drink, and sleep at ease
Is all that I desire."

Trochaic verse is of several kinds.

1. The shortest Trochaic verse in the English language consists of one Trochee and a long syllable : as,

"Billy Bläck Got the sack."

Lindley Murray asserts that this measure is defective in dignity, and can seldom be used on serious occasions. Yet it is Pope who thus sings :

"Dreadful screams,
Dismal gleams.
Fires that glow,
Shrieks of woe," &c.

And for our own poor part, let us see what we can make out of a storm.

 "See the clouds Like to shrouds All so dun, Hide the Sun : Daylight dies ; Winds arise ; Songsters quake, 'Midst the brake ; Shepherds beat Swift retreat : Thunder rolls Save our souls !— Welkin glares— Lightning flares, While it splits Oak to bits— Hail comes down— Oh, my crown ! Patter crack ! Clatter whack ! 	 "Lo you there ! High in air Whirlwinds snatch Tiles and thatch ! Steeple nods ! Oh ! ye Gods ! Hark !—that bang !— Brazen clang ! There the bell Thund'ring fell ! How it pours ! Ocean roars, Earth replies— Mind your eyes— Here's a cave— Oh ! that's brave ! Gracious Powers Safety's ours !"
--	---

2. The second English form of the Trochaic consists of two feet : as,

"Věrmicěllī, Cŭrrānt jělly."

It sometimes contains two feet, or trochees, with an additional long syllable : as,

"Yōūth īnclīned tō wēd'
 Go and shave thy head."

3. The third species consists of three trochees : as,

"Sing ā song ōf sixpēnce.

Or of three trochees, with an additional long syllable: as,

“Thrice mÿ cōat, hāve ō’er thēe rōll’d,
 Summer hot and winter cold,
 Since the Snip’s creative art
 Into being bade thee start;
 Now like works the most sublime,
 Thou display’st the power of time.
 Broad grey patches plainly trace,
 Right and left each blade-bone’s place;
 When thy shining collār’s scann’d,
 Punsters think on classic land:
 Thread-bare sleeves thine age proclaim,
 Elbows worn announce the same;
 Elbows mouldy-black of hue,
 Save where white a crack shines through;
 While thy parting seams declare
 Thou’rt unfit for farther wear—
 Then, farewell! “What! Moses! ho!”
 “Clo’, Sir? clo’, Sir? clo’, Sir? clo’?”

4. The fourth Trochaic species consists of four trochees, as:

“Ugh! yōu littlĕ lūmp ōf blūbbĕr,
 Sleep, oh! sleep in quiet, do!
 Cease awhile your bib to slobber—
 Cease your bottle mouth to screw.

“How I wish your eyelids never Would uncloze again at all;
 For I know as soon as ever
 You’re awake, you’re sure to squal..

“Dad and Mammy’s darling honey,
 Tomb-stone cherub, stuff’d with slops,
 Let each noodle, dolt, and spooney
 Smack, who will, your pudding chops.

“ As for me, as soon I’d smother,
 As I’d drown a sucking cat,
 You, you cub, or any other,
 Nasty little squalling brat.”

“ Would you, you disagreeable old Bachelor?”

This form may take an additional long syllable, but this measure is very uncommon. Example :

“Chrōnōnhōtōnthōlōgōs thē Grēat, Godlike in a barrow kept his state.”

5. The fifth Trochaic species is likewise uncommon ; and, as a Bowbellian would say, “uncommon” ugly, It contains five trochees : as,

“ Hēre līes Mārŷ, wīfe ōf Thōmās Cārtēr,
 Who to typhus fever proved a martyr.”

These are a specimen of the “uncouth rhymes” so touchingly alluded to by Gray.

6. The sixth form of the English Trochaic is a line of six trochees : as,

“ Mōst bēwitchīng dāmsēl, charmīng Arābēllā, Prithee, cast an eye of pity on a fellow.”

The Dactylic measure is extremely uncommon. The following may be considered an example of one species of it :

“ Cēliā thē crūēl, rēsōlv’d nōt tō mārřý sōon,
Boasts of a heart like a fortified garrison,
Bulwarks and battlements keeping the beaux all off,
Shot from within knocking lovers like foes all off.”

Anapæstic verses are of various kinds.

1. The shortest anapæstic verse is a single anapæst :
as,

“ Īn thē glāss
There’s an ass.”

This measure, after all, is ambiguous ; for if the stress of the voice be laid on the first and third syllables, it becomes trochaic. Perhaps, therefore, it is best to consider the first form of our Anapæstic verse, as made up of two anapæsts : as,

“ Sēt ā schōolbōy āt wōrk
With a knife and a fork.”

And here if you like, you may have another short syllable : as,

“ Ānd hōw sōon thē yōūng glūtton
Will astonish your mutton !”

2. The second species consists of three anapæsts : as,

“ Āmāryllīs wās slēndēr ānd tāll,
Colin Clodpole was dumpy and fat ;
And tho’ she did’n’t like him at all,
Yet he doted on her for all that.”

This metre is sometimes denominated sing-song.

3. The third kind of English Anapæstics may be very well exemplified by an Irish song :

‘ Hāve yōu ē’er hād thē lūck tō sēe Dōnnýbrōok Fāir ?”

It consists, as will have been observed, of four anapaests. Sometimes it admits of a short syllable at the end of the verse: as,

In the dēad of the night, whēn wīth dire cātēr wāuling
Of grīmal kins in chorus the house-tops resound:
All insensibly drunk, and unconsciously sprawling
In the kennel, how pleasant it is to be found!"

The various specimens of versification of which examples have been given, may be improved and varied by the admission of secondary feet into their composition; but as we are not writing an Art of Poetry, we cannot afford to show how: particularly as the only way, after all, of acquiring a real knowledge of the structure of English verse, is by extensive reading. Besides, there yet remain a few Directions for Poetical Beginners, which we feel ourselves called upon to give, and for which, if we do not take care, we shall not have room.

The commencement of a poet's career is usually the writing of nonsense verses. The nonsense of these compositions is very often unintentional; but sometimes words are put together avowedly without regard to sense, and with no other view than that of acquiring a familiarity with metrical arrangement: as,

"Approach, disdain, involuntary, tell."

But this is dry work. It may be necessary to compose in this way just at first, but in our opinion, there is a good and a bad taste to be displayed even in writing nonsense verses; that is, verses which really deserve that name. We recommend the young poet to make it his aim to render his nonsense as PERFECT as possible.

It were manifestly culpable to make no mention, in a work of this sort, of certain measures which are especially and essentially, of a comic nature. Some of these have been already adverted to, but two principal varieties yet remain to be considered.

1. Measures taken from the Latin, in which the structure of the ancient verse, as far as the number and arrangement of the feet are concerned, is preserved, but the quantity of which is regulated in accordance with the spirit of our own language. The character of such verses will be best displayed by employing them on sentimental or serious subjects. Take, for example, Long and Short, or Hexameter and Pentameter verses.

“Jūliā, gīrl ōf mŷ heārt, īs thān jēssāmīne swēetēr, ōr frēsh mēads

Hāy-cōvēr’d ; whāt rōse tīnts thōse ōn hēr chēeks, thāt flōurīsh,

Approach ? those bright eyes, what stars, what glittering dew-drops ?

And oh ! what Parian marble, or snow, that bosom ?
If she my love return, what bliss will be greater than mine ; but

What more deep sadness if she reprove my passion ?
Either a bridegroom proud yon ivy-clad church shall receive me

Soon ; or the cold church-yard me with its turf shall cover.”

Or the Sapphic metre of which the late Mr. Canning’s “ Knife-Grinder ” is so brilliant an example. Sappho, fair reader, was a poetess, who made love-verses which could be actually scanned. History relates that, for the sake of some unprincipled or unfeeling fellow, she committed felo de se.

“ ‘ I cān ēndūre this crūēl pāin nō lōngēr ;
Fare ye well, blue skies, rivers, fields, and song-birds !’

Thus the youth spoke ; and adding, ‘ Oh, Jemima !’
Plunged in the billow !’

2. Measures reducible to no rule, or Doggrel.
Sternhold and Hopkins were illustrious as Doggrel writers.

Doggrel is commonly used by anonymous poets for the purpose of embodying the moral reflections which a homicide or an execution excites in the sensitive mind. May we hope that our remarks on Prosody will in some little degree tend to facilitate, perhaps to improve, the future treatment of those two deeply interesting subjects—Love and Murder?

CHAPTER III.

PUNCTUATION.

“Mind your stops.” This is one of the earliest maxims inculcated by the instructors of youth. Hence it is clear that the subject of Punctuation is an important one : but inasmuch as the reader, who has arrived at the present page, has either not understood a word that he has been reading, or else knows as much about the matter as we can tell him, we fear that a long dissertation concerning periods, commas, and so on, would only serve to embarrass his progress in learning with useless stops. We shall, therefore, confine ourselves to that notice of Punctuation, and that only, which the peculiar nature of our work may require.

First, it may be remarked, that the notes of admiration which we so often hear in theatres, may be called notes of hand. Secondly, that notes of interrogation are not at all like bank notes ; although they are largely uttered in Banco Regina. Let us now proceed with our subject.

Punctuation is the soul of Grammar, as Punctuality is that of business.

Perhaps somebody or other may take advantage of what we have said, to prove both Punctuation and Punctuality immaterial. No matter.

It is both absurd and inconvenient to stand upon points.

Of how much consequence, however, Punctuation is, the student may form some idea, by considering the different effects which a piece of poetry, for instance, which he has been accustomed to regard as sublime or beautiful, will have, when liberties are taken with it in that respect.

Imagine an actor commencing Hamlet's famous soliloquy, thus :

“To be ; or not to be that is. The question,” &c.

Or saying, in the person of Duncan, in Macbeth

“This castle hath a pleasant seat, the air.”

Or as the usurper himself, exclaiming,

“The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!

Where got'st thou that goose? Look!”

Crying, as Romeo,

“It is my lady O! It is my love!”

Or in the character of Norval, in the tragedy of Douglas, giving this account of himself and his origin:

“My name is Norval. On the Grampian hills
My father feeds.”

We have now said as much as we think it necessary to say on the head of English Grammar. We shall conclude our labors with an "Address to Young Students;" and as to the question, what that has to do with our subject, we shall leave it to be settled by Lindley Murray, whose example, in this respect, we follow. All we shall observe is, that in our opinion, advice concerning manners stand in the same relation to a Comic English Grammar, as instruction in morals does to a Serious one. For the remarks which it will now be our business to make, we bespeak the indulgence of our elder readers, and the attention of such as are of tender age.

ADDRESS TO YOUNG STUDENTS.

YOUNG GENTLEMEN,

HAVING attentively perused the foregoing pages, you will be desirous, it is to be presumed, of carrying still farther those comical pursuits in which, with both pleasure and profit to yourselves, you have been lately engaged. Should such be your laudable intention, you will learn, with feelings of lively satisfaction, that it is one, in the accomplishment of which, thanks to Modern Taste, you will find encouragement at every step. The literature of the day is professedly comic, and of the few works which are not made ludicrous by the design of their authors, the majority are rendered so in spite of it. In the course of your reading, however, you will be frequently brought into contact with hackney-coachmen, cabmen, lackeys, turnkeys, thieves, lawyers' clerks, medical students, and other people of that description, who are all very amusing when properly viewed, as the monkeys and such like animals at the Zoological Gardens are, when you look at them through the bars of their cage. But too great familiarity with persons of this class is sure to breed contempt, not for them and their manners, but for the usages and modes of expression adopted in parlors and drawing-rooms, that is to say, in good society. Nay, it is very likely to cause those who indulge in it to learn various tricks and eccentricities, both of behavior and speech, for "It is certain, that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another." Shakspeare.

Beset thus, as you will necessarily be, by perils and dangers in your wanderings amid the fields of Comicality, you will derive great advantage from knowing before-hand what you are likely to meet with, and what it will be incumbent on you to avoid. It is to furnish you with this information that the following hints and instructions are intended.

Be careful, when you hear yourself called by name, to reply "Here I am," and not "Here you are," an error into which you are very likely to be led by the perusal of existing authors.

When you partake, if it be your habit to do so, of the beverage called porter, drink it as you would water, or any other liquid. Do not wink your eye, or nod sideways to your companion; such actions, especially when preceded by blowing away the foam which collects on the top of the vessel, being exceedingly inelegant: in order that you may not be incommoded by this foam or froth, always pour the fluid gently into a tumbler, instead of drinking it out of the metallic tankard in which it is usually brought to you.

In asking for malt liquor generally, never request the waiter to "draw it mild;" and do not, on any occasion, be guilty of using the same phrase in a metaphorical sense, that is to say, as a substitute for "Do it quietly," "Be gentle," and the like.

Never exhort young ladies, during a quadrille, to "fake away," or to "flare up," for they, being unacquainted with the meaning of such terms, will naturally conclude that it is an improper one.

Avoid inquiries after the health of another person's mother, using that word synonymously with Mamma, to denote a female parent. Though you may be really innocent of any intention to be rude, your motives may very possibly be misconstrued. Remember also on no account to put questions, either to friends or strangers, respecting the quantity of soap in their possession.

Should it be necessary for you to speak of some one smoking tobacco, do not call that substance a weed, or the act of using it "blowing a cloud."

When an acquaintance pays you a visit, take care, in rising to receive him, not to appear to be washing your hands, and, should you be engaged in writing at the time, place your pen on the table, or in the ink-stand, and not behind your ear.

Observe, when your tailor comes to measure you, the way in which he wears his hair, and should your own style in this particular unfortunate resemble his, be sure to alter it immediately.

Never dance à la cuisinière, that is to say, do not cut capers.

Eschew large shirt pins.

Never say "Ma'am" or "Miss," in addressing a young lady. If you cannot contrive to speak to her without doing so, say nothing.

Never, under any circumstances, let the abbreviation "gent." for gentleman, escape the enclosure of your teeth. Above all things, for the sake of whatever you hold most dear, never say "me and another gent."

When you receive a coin of any kind, deposit it at once in your pocket, without the needless preliminary of furling it in the air.

Never ask a gentleman how much he has a-year.

In speaking of a person of your own age, or of an elderly gentleman, do not say, Old So-and-so, but So-and-so, or Mr. So-and-so, as the case may be: and have no nicknames for each other. We were much horrified not long since, by hearing a great coarse fellow, in a leathern hat and fustian jacket, exclaim, turning round to his companion, "Now, then, come along, old Blokey!"

When you have got a cold in the head and weak eyes, do not go and call on young ladies.

Do not eat gravy with a knife, for fear those about you should suppose you to be going to commit suicide.

In offering to help a person at dinner, do not say, "Allow me to assist you." When you ask people what wine they will take, never say, "What'll you have?" or, "What'll you do it in?"

If you are talking to a clergyman about another member of the clerical profession, adopt some other method of describing his avocation than that of saying, "I believe he is in your line."

Do not recommend an omelet to a lady, as a good article.

Be cautious not to use the initial letter of a person's surname, in mentioning or in addressing him. For instance, never think of saying, "Mrs. Hobbs, pray, how is Mr. H.?"

Call all articles of dress by their proper names. What delight can be found by a thinking mind in designating a hat as a tile, trousers, kickseys, a neckerchief, a fogle, or a choker; or a great coat, an upper Benjamin? And never speak of clothes, collectively, as toggs or toggery.

We here approach the conclusion of our labors. Young gentlemen, once more it is earnestly requested that you will give your careful attention to the rules and admonitions which have been above laid down for your guidance. We might have given a great many more; but we hope that the spirit of our instructions will enable the diligent youth to supply, by observation and reflection, that which, for obvious reasons, we have necessarily left unsaid. And now we bid you farewell. That you may never have the misfortune of entering, with splashed boots, a drawing-room full of ladies; that you may never, having been engaged in a brawl on the previous evening, meet, with a black eye, the object of your affections the next morning; that you may never, in a moment of agitation, omit the aspirate, or use it when you ought not; that your laundress may always do justice to your linen ; and your tailor make your clothes well, and send them home in due time ; that your braces may never give way during a waltz ; that you may never, sitting in a strong light at a large dinner-party, suddenly remember that you have not shaved for two days ; that your hands and face may ever be free from tan, chaps, freckles, pimples, brandy-blossoms, and all other disfigurements ; that you may never be either inelegantly fat, or ridiculously lean ; and finally, that you may always have plenty to eat, plenty to drink, and plenty to laugh at, we earnestly and sincerely wish. And should your lot in life be other than fortunate, we can only say, that we advise you to bear it with patience ; to cultivate Comic Philosophy ; and to look upon your troubles as a joke.

THE FLORENCES' IRISH BOY AND YANKEE GIRL SONGSTER.

CONTENTS :

Away Down East.
Bachelor's Hall.
Ballygarren.
Barney O'Neil.
Billy O'Rourke.
Bobbing Around.
Bold Privateer.
Boy with the Auburn Hair.
Captain Fitzeasy.
Emma Lee.
Evening Star.
Ever of Thee.
Flaming O'Flannagan.
Homeward Bound.
Iffy, Iffy, If.
I have no Mother Now.
Independence Day.
Isle of Beauty.
Johnny is gone for a Soldier.
Josiah Brown.
Kitty O'Rourke.
Larry O'Brien.
Last Week I took a Wife.
Listen, Dear Fanny.
Lost Umberrell.
Mary Avourneen.
Michael O'Neary's Wake.

Molly of the Mead.
My Boyhood's Happy Home.
My Heart is Sad.
My Son, Mickey.
North McShane.
Och, Blood and 'Ounds.
Oh! Come With Me.
Ould Ireland! You're My Darlin'.
Our Mary Ann.
Paddy O'Flannagan.
Paddy's Wedding.
Peter Gray.
Riddle Cum Dinky Doo.
Rim, Tom! Tramp!
Sal Sling.
The Cavalier.
The Emerald Isle.
The Irishman's Shanty.
The Irish Shoemaker.
The Scenes of Home.
The Tail iv My Coat.
Trust to Luck.
We were Boys and Girls Together.
When the Swallows Homeward Fly
Widow Clum-ee.
Widow Mahony.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

THE LOVE AND SENTIMENTAL SONGSTER.

CONTENTS :

A Penny for Your Thoughts.
Alice Gray.
Autumn Leaves be Strewed Around
Aggie Asthore.
All's for the Best.
Brightest Eyes.
Be Off with You, now.
Ben Bolt.
Beautiful Silver Sea.
Come into the Garden, Maud.
Evening Star.
Ever of Thee.
Emma Lee.
Ellen Bayne.
Good News from Home.
Good Night! Good Night, Beloved!
Good-bye, Sweetheart! Good-bye!
Give Me a Cot in the Valley I love.
Come Again!
Hark! I Hear an Angel Sing.

He Doeth All Things Well.
I Ask but for One Thrilling Kiss.
I Wandered by the Brook Side.
I am Leaving Thee.
I'd Offer Thee this Hand
I'm not Myself at all.
In this Old Chair.
Jenny's Coming o'er the Green.
Kitty Tyrrell.
Kathleen Mavourneen.
Katy Darling.
Kitty of Coleraine.
Little Jenny Dow.
Lizzie Dies To-night.
Listen to the Mocking Bird.
Last Greeting.
Let the Toast be Dear Woman.
Love Me Little, Love Me Long.
Mary Aileen.
Molly Bawn.

2 Contents of Dick & Fitzgerald's Dime Song Books.

My Mother Dear.
My Soul in One Unbroken Sigh.
Mary of Argyle.
Norah, the Bride of Kildare.
Norah McShane.
Norah, Darling, Don't Believe Them.
Oh! Where is the Harm of a Little Kiss.
Pretty Jane.
Rock Me to Sleep, Mother.
Rocked in the Cradle.
Shells of Ocean.
Scenes that are Brightest.
Some One to Love.
The Dearest Spot.
The Gambler's Wife.
The Silver Moon.
The Dying Californian.
The Low-backed Car.
The Heart Bowed Down.
The Standard Bearer.
The Irish Emigrant's Lament.
The Harp that Once.
The Pirate's Serenade.

The Ivy Green.
The Light of Other Days.
The Good-bye at the Door.
The Dreams of the Heart.
The Miller's Daughter.
The Murmuring Sea.
The Three Ages of Love.
Then You'll Remember Me.
Thou art Gone from My Gaze.
Thou art Mine Own, Love.
'Tis Midnight Hour.
True Friendship.
Twilight Dews.
'Tis Hard to Give the Hand where the Heart can never be.
Why have My Loved Ones Gone.
When the Swallows Homeward Fly.
Where are the Friends.
Would I were a Boy Again.
We Met by Chance.
Why do I Love Thee Yet.
Within a Mile of Edinboro' Town.
Will You Love Me Then as Now!

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon the receipt of ten cents.

THE CHARLEY O'MALLEY IRISH SONGSTER.

CONTENTS:

Barnaby Finegan.
Black Turf.
Bryan O'Lynn.
Biddy Magee.
Corporal Casey. [master.
Dennis M'Castor, the Irish School-
Dublin Lasses.
From Munster I Came.
Good-Morrow to Your Nightcap.
I came from the Land of the Pat's and Pitatees.
I Came from the Roar.
Irish English Scotchman.
Irish Hearts for the Ladies.
Johnny M'Clusky.
Kill or Cure.
Katty Mooney.
Katty, Avourneen.
Leave us a Lock of Your Hair.
Meet me, Miss Molly Malone.
Molly Malone.
Now, Can't You be Aisy?
Oh! Once we were Illigant People.
Pat's Curiosity Shop.
Paddy Conner.

Paddy Hegarty's Leather Breeches.
Paddy's Wake.
Pat and his Leather Breeches.
Shelah O'Neal.
The Snob and the Tailor.
The Irishman.
The Real Irish Stew.
The Land of Old Erin.
The Irishman's Wager.
The Irish Love Letter.
The Hard-Hearted Molly Carew.
The Cobbler.
The Flaming O'Flanagans.
The Boys of the Irish Brigade.
The Night before Larry was Stretched.
The Young Irish Gentleman.
The Piper.
The Darlin' Ould Stick.
The Wake of Teddy the Tiler.
The Loves of Judy Rooney and Looney Conner.
What Man would be without a Wife, I Should Like to Know.
Widow Malone.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

Courteney's Dictionary of Abbreviations; Literary, Scientific, Commercial, Ecclesiastical, Military, Naval, Legal and Medical. A book of reference—3,000 abbreviations—for the solution of all literary mysteries. By EDWARD S. C. COURTENEY, Esq. This is a very useful book. Everybody should get a copy.....Price 12 cts.

Blunders in Behavior Corrected.....Price 12 cts.

A concise code of deportment for both sexes. "It will polish and refine either sex, and is Chesterfield superseded.—Home Companion.

Five Hundred French Phrases. Adapted for those who aspire to speak and write French correctly.....Price 12 cts.

How to detect Adulteration in our Daily Food and Drink. A complete analysis of the frauds and deceptions practiced upon articles of consumption, by storekeepers and manufacturers; with full directions to detect genuine from spurious, by simple and inexpensive means.....Price 12 cts.

The Young Housekeeper's Book; or, How to have a Good Living upon a Small Income.....Price 12 cts.

How to be Healthy: Being a complete Guide to Long Life. By a Retired Physician.....Price 12 cts.

How to Cut and Contrive Children's Clothes at a Small Cost With numerous explanatory engravings.....Price 12 cts.

How to Talk and Debate; or, Fluency of Speech Attained without the Sacrifice of Elegance and Sense.....Price 12 cts.

How to Manage Children.....Price 12 cts.

The Great Wizard of the North's Hand-Book of Natural Magic. Being a series of the newest Tricks of Deception, arranged for Aina-teurs and Lovers of the Art. By Professor J. H. ANDERSON, the Great Wizard of the North.....Price 25 cts.

The Knapsack full of Fun; or, 1000 Rations of Laughter. Illustrated with over 500 Comical Engravings, and containing over 1000 Jokes and Funny Stories by "DOESTICKS," and other witty writers. Large Quarto.....Price 25 cts.

The Plate of Chowder; A Dish for Funny Fellows. Appropriately illustrated with 100 Comic Engravings. By the Author of "Mrs. Partridge's Carpet-Bag of Fun." 12mo, paper cover....Price 25 cts.

Deacon Doolittle's Drolleries. A Collection of Funny and Laughable Stories told by the Deacon, in which he had either acted a part or taken much interest in. This book is got up especially for the benefit of thin and spare people—or for that class of mankind whom it would benefit to "Laugh and Grow Fat." It contains some thirty or forty of the best stories ever invented, full of droll and laughable incidents, calculated to drive away the blues, and to make one in good humor with all mankind.....Price 12 cts.

The Laughable Adventures of Messrs. Brown, Jones, & Robinson, showing where they went, and how they went; what they did, and how they did it. With nearly two hundred most thrillingly-comic engravings.....Price 25 cts.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

Every Woman Her Own Lawyer. A private Guide in all matters of Law, of essential interest to Women, and by the aid of which every Female may, in whatever situation, understand her legal course and redress, and be her own Legal Adviser. By GEORGE BISHOP. Large 12mo, nearly 400 pages, bound in half leather. This book should be in the hands of every woman, young or old, married or single, in the United States.-----Price $1 00.

Richardson's Monitor of Free-Masonry: A Complete Guide to the various Ceremonies and Routine in Free-Masons' Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, Hierarchies, &c., &c., in all the Degrees, whether Modern, Ancient, Ineffable, Philosophical, or Historical. Containing, also, the Signs, Tokens, Grips, Pass-words, Decorations, Drapery, Dress, Regalia, and Jewels, in each Degree. Profusely illustrated with Explanatory Engravings, Plans of the Interior of Lodges, &c., By JABEZ RICHARDSON, A. M. A book of 185 pages.
Bound in paper covers -----Price 50 cts.
Bound and gilt -----Price 75 cts.

This is the only book ever written which gives a detailed description of all the doings inside a Masonic meeting.

The Manufacture of Liquors, Wines, and Cordials. Without the aid of Distillation; also, the Manufacture of Effervescing Beverages, and Syrups, Vinegar, and Bitters. Prepared and arranged expressly for the Trade. By PIERRE LACOUR. Procure a copy of "Lacour on the Manufacture of Liquors," or if you do not wish to purchase, look through the book for a few moments as a matter of curiosity. Physicians' and Druggists' pharmaceutical knowledge cannot be complete without a copy of this work. 12mo, cloth.-----Price $2 00.

Mrs. Partington's Carpet-Bag of Fun. A Collection of over one thousand of the most comical stories, amusing adventures, side-splitting jokes, cheek-extending poetry, funny conundrums, QUEER SAYINGS OF MRS. PARTINGTON, heart-rending puns, witty repartees, etc., etc. The whole illustrated by about 150 comic wood cuts. 12mo, 300 pages, cloth, gilt.-----Price $1 00
Ornamented paper covers.-----Price 50 cts.

Sam Slick in Search of a Wife. 12mo, paper.-----Price 50 cts.
Cloth -----Price $1 00

Everybody has heard of "Sam Slick, the Clockmaker," and he has given his opinion on almost everything.

Sam Slick's Nature and Human Nature. Large 12mo.
Paper -----Price 50 cts.
Cloth -----Price $1 00

The Attachee; or, Sam Slick in England. Large 12mo.
Paper -----Price 50 cts.
Cloth -----Price $1 00

Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings. Paper.-----Price 50 cts.
Cloth -----Price $1 00

The Game of Draughts, or Checkers, Simplified and Explained. With Practical Diagrams and Illustrations, together with a Checker board, numbered and printed in red. Containing the Eighteen Standard Games, with over 200 of the best variations, selected from the various authors, together with many original ones never before published. By D. SCATTERGOOD. Bound in cloth, with flexible cover.-----Price 38 cts.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

TONY PASTOR'S COMIC SONGSTER.

CONTENTS:

A Big thing on Ice.
A Parody, (comic recitation).
A Sweetener for the Ladies.
Be Sure a Thing will Pay.
Billy, I Have Missed You.
Couldnt Stand the Press.
Dont Think Much of You.
Flying Your Kite too High.
Folks that Put on Airs.
Good Advice.
Happy Hezekiah.
Happy Land of Canaan.
I Can't See It.
Joe Bowers.
Lather and Shave.
Merry Month of May.
My Mary has the Longest Nose.
Nick, Not at Home.
Ould Irish Stew.
One Good Turn Deserves Another.
Played Out.
Sound on the Goose.
Strike while the Iron's Hot.
Something New to Wear.
Sammy Slap, the Bill-Sticker.

The Clown's Consolations to Disconsolate People.
The Age of Machinery.
The 'Orrible Tale.
The Goose Hangs High.
The Tickler.
The Ragged Coat.
The Yankee Quilting Party.
The Goot Lager Beer.
The Lazy Club.
The Farmer's Alphabet.
The "Rights of Man."
The Widow Wagtail.
The Bachelor's Dream.
The Obstinate Man.
The Traveler, (a comic recitation).
Think of your Head in the Morning.
Tuscaloosa Sam.
Unhappy Jeremiah.
Umbrella Courtship.
Wonder of the Age.
Whole Hog or None.
What will Mrs. Grundy Say?

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage,
upon receipt of ten cents.

THE CAMP-FIRE SONG BOOK.

A collection of Jolly, Patriotic, Convivial, and National Songs, embracing all the Popular Camp and Marching Songs, as sung by our Army.

CONTENTS:

A Big Thing Coming.
Abraham's Daughter.
A Good Time Coming, Boys.
A Glass is Good.
America.
Annie Laurie.
Auld Lang Syne.
A Yankee Ship and a Yankee Crew.
Benny Havens.
Bully for Us.
Camp War Song.
Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean.
Come, Landlords, Fill.
Come, Raise the Banner High.
Corporal Kelly.
Dixie of Our Union.
Dixie of the Michigan Boys.
Drink it Down.
Free and Easy Still.

Gay and Happy.
God Save our Native Land.
Hail Columbia.
Happy Land of Canaan.
Home Again.
Home, Sweet Home.
How are You, Johnny Bull?
Hurrah for the Union.
I Love a Sixpence.
Jeff Davis; or, the King of the Southern Dominions.
Jonathan to John.
Let Cowards Shirk their Duty.
Little Rhode Island.
My Love, he is a Zou-zu.
My Country, 'tis of Thee I Sing.
Our Country's Flag.
Our Father Land.
Our Flag is There.
Our German Volunteers.

4 Contents of Dick & Fitzgerald's Dime Song Books.

O'Toole and McFinnigan on the War.
Pat's Opinion of the Stars and Stripes.
Red, White and Blue.
Songs of the Camp.
The Brave Boys of Company D.
The Bugle Note.
The Flag of our Union.
The Gallant Zouaves.
The Girl I Left Behind Me.
The London "Times" on American Affairs.
The New York Volunteers.
The Soldier's Hymn.

The Stripes and the Stars.
The Star Spangled Banner (with additional verses).
The Union Marseillaise.
The Union Must and Shall be Preserved.
The Union Root, Hog, or Die.
The Yankee Volunteers.
There Lies the Whisky Bottle Empty on the Shelf.
Union and Justice.
Viva L' America.
Viva La Compagnie.
Whack! Row de Dow.

All the above Songs go to Popular and well-known tunes, so that they can easily be sung. Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

THE SHAMROCK; OR, SONGS OF OLD IRELAND.

CONTENTS:

Aggie Asthore.
Angel's Whisper.
A Sweet Irish Girl is the Darling.
Barnaby Finnegan.
Colleen Bawn.
Darling Old Stick.
Doran's Ass.
Erin go Bragh.
Erin is My Home.
Green Grow the Rushes, O!
Heigh for the Petticoats.
He Tells me He Loves Me.
Hibernia's Lovely Jean.
I'd Mourn the Hopes.
I'm Leaving Old Ireland.
I'm Not Myself at All.
Irish Post-Boys' Song.
Irish Tinker's Lament.
Kathleen, Mavourneen.
Katty, Avourneen.
Kitty Tyrrell.
Lament of the Irish Emigrant.
Limerick Races.
Ma Allicen, Asthore.
Molly, Asthore.
Molly Bawn.
My Heart's in Old Ireland.
My Nick-name is Barney.
Norah McShane.
Norah, the Pride of Kildare.
Och! Norah, Dear.
Ould Ireland! You're My Darlin'.
Paddy Goshlow.

Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow.
Purty Molly Brullaghan.
Savourneen Deelish.
Sergeant McFudgin.
Teddy O'Neal.
The Blackbird.
The Blarney.
The Captain.
The Croppy Boy.
The Dear Irish Boy.
The Exile of Erin.
The Fairy Boy.
The Fine Old Irish Gentleman.
The Four-Leaved Shamrock.
The Gray Mare.
The Green Bushes.
The Green Linnet. [Halls.
The Harp that Once Thro' Tara's
The Irish Brigade, O!
The Irish Jaunting Car.
The Land of Potatoes, O!
The Lass o' Gowrie.
The Low-backed Car.
The New Policeman.
The Old Country Party.
The Patriot Mother.
The Road of Life.
The Shan Van Vogh.
The White Cockade.
The Wonderful Irishman.
Up for the Green.
Widow Macthree.
Willy Reilly.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

FRED MAY'S COMIC IRISH SONGSTER.

CONTENTS :

Beer, Boys, Beer.	Sal Sly and Billy Snivel.
Biddy Magee.	Simon the Cellarer.
Cabbage Green.	Smuggler King.
Comic Medley.	St. Keren and King O'Toole.
Don't Speak of a Man as You find [Him.	Teddy O'Neil.
Dublin Bay.	The Black Flag floating gallantly.
Encore verses to Biddy Magee.	The Gay Girls of New York.
Fred May's New Medley.	The Irish Janus.
I Likes a Drop of Good Beer,	The Land of My Birth.
(music.)	The Learned Man.
I'm a Ranting, Roaring Blade.	The Old Farm Gate.
I was the Boy for Bewitching them.	The Old Maid and her Tom Cat.
Judge not a Man.	The Old Musqueteer.
Katty Mooney.	The Pope He leads a Happy Life.
Larry Morgan.	The Rambling Boy.
Larry O'Brien.	The Rambling Boy of Dublin.
Limerick Races.	The Workhouse Boy.
One Bottle more	Toasts and Sentiments.
Paddy Miles.	True-born Irishman.
Paddy's Visit to the Theatre.	Very Polite of Her.
Poor Old Sailor.	Watchman.
Priest of the Parish.	What are You Crying for, Nelly.
Quiet Lodgings.	With a Jolly Full Bottle.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

WOOD'S MINSTREL SONG BOOK.

CONTENTS :

Aunt Dina Roe.	Katy Darling, (music.)
Brudder Bone's Love Scrape.	Listen to the Mocking Bird.
Charleston Gals.	Lubly Colored Dine.
Colored Fancy Ball.	Lubly Dinah.
Colored Orphan Boy.	Nancy Till.
Cynthia Sue.	New York by Moonlight.
De Old Jaw Bone.	O'er the Hills, Bessie.
De Singing Darkey ob de Ohio.	Poor Uncle Tom.
Dina's Wedding.	Romping Nell, (music.)
Ellen Bayne.	Rosa May.
Emma Snow.	Rosy Anna.
Female Slave's Lament.	Sally White.
Fireman's Death, (music.)	Suscy Brown.
Forty-five Jokes and Conundrums.	The Age of Humbug.
Gal from the South.	The Locust Hum.
Ginger's Wedding.	Uncle Gabriel; or, Sandy Point.
Good Old Hut at Home.	Wake Up, Mose.
Guinea Maid.	We are gwain to de Shucking.
Hail! All Hail!	Where is the Spot that we were
I wish I was in Old Virginia.	Born on.
Jane Munroe.	Where is my Pompey Gone?
Jolly Old Crow.	Would I were a Boy again.
Julius Caesar Green.	Wood's Delineators.
Julius' Bride.	Young Folks at Home.
Kate Loraine, (music.)

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, on receipt of ten cents.

THE FRISKY IRISH SONGSTER.

CONTENTS :

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------------|
| An Irishman's Excuse for a Fight; or, Thread on the Tail of my Coat. | Petticoat Lane. |
| A Tight Irish Heart for the Ladies | Robinson Crusoe. |
| Balinnama Oro. | Sheelah O'Neal. |
| Barrel of Pork. | Soldier's Dream. |
| Barth of Cakes. | Sprig of Shillelah. |
| Biddy McGuire of Ballinaclash. | Summer Hill Courtship. |
| Bryan O'Lynn. | The Anchor's Weighed. |
| Cruiskeen Lawn. | The Bells of Shandon. |
| Dolly Dunn of Donnybrook. | The Freemason. |
| Don't You Think She Did. | The Great, Big, Ugly Irishman. |
| Friend, by my Sowl, I'll Whisky
Drink. | The Guager's Slip. |
| Gaffer Gray. | The Humors of Passage. |
| Going Home with the Milk in the Morning. | The Hungry Army. |
| Handy Andy. | The Jolly Beggar. |
| Hoppy Hooflahan's Lament on the Death of His Duck. | The Land of Shillelah. |
| Horticultural Wife. | The Man in the Moon. |
| Jeff Davis. | The Miller's Song. |
| Larry McHale. | The Muleteer. |
| Murrough O'Monahan. | The New York Volunteer. |
| Murthough Delany's Birth. | The Pirate Crew. |
| Nell Flaherty's Drake. | The Stars and Stripes. |
| Paddy Goshlow. | The Wedding of Ballyporeen. |
| Paddy's Grave. | The Widow that Keeps the Cock Inn. |
| Pat and the Priest. | The Wild Irishman. |
| | There's Room for All. |
| | Useful Knowledge. |
| | What an Illigant Life a Friar Leads |
| | Young Volunteer. |

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage,
upon receipt of ten cents.

GUS SHAW'S COMIC SONG BOOK.

CONTENTS :

- | | |
|--|---------------------------------|
| Alonzo, the Brave. | Rat Catcher's Daughter. |
| Shells of Oysters. | Lurboard Watch. |
| The Bill-Poster. | Larry O'Brien. |
| Mr. and Mrs. Snibbs. | The Irishman's Shanty. |
| Nora Daley. | New York in Slices. |
| St. Patrick's Birth-Day. | Hamlet—A Tragedy. |
| The Female Smuggler. | Nonsense. |
| The Lovely Flea. | Bumper of Lager. |
| Sights for a Father. | Brogue and Blarney. |
| Nepoletaine. | My Mary's Nose. |
| My Mother was a True Born
Irishman. | Fair of Clogheen. |
| Paper Song. | Billy Nutts, the Poet. |
| Mr. and Mrs. Bone. | In the Days when I was Hard Up. |
| Robin Ruff and Gaffer Green. | The Irish Jaunting Car. |
| Root, Hog, or Die. | Wooden Leg Sailor. |
| | The Sicilian Maid. |

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage,
upon receipt of ten cents.

WOOD'S NEW PLANTATION MELODIES.

CONTENTS :

Belle of Alabama.
 Belle of Baltimore.
 Belle of Tennessee.
 Come, Darkies, Listen to Dis Song.
 Chorus from Sonnambula.
 Dandy Broadway Swell.
 Dearest Mae.
 De Corn 'Top Blossom.
 De Purty Yellow Gal am a Warning.
 De Skeeters do Bite.
 De Yellow Gal wid a Bloomer on.
 De York River by Steamboat.
 Eighty-one Conundrums and Jokes Eph Horn's Celebrated Story of the Misfortunes of his Lady Love.
 Ephriam's Lament.
 False Hearted Clementina.
 Fare Thee Well, Kitty Dear.
 Gal wid de Blue Dress on.
 Gwine to Run all Night.
 Hark, I Hear an Angel Sing.
 Have a Little Dance.
 Hoe On.
 Hop Light, Loo.
 Jordan is a Hard Road to Travel.
 Julia is a Beauty.

Life by the Galley Fire.
 Lubly Rosa.
 Louisiana Bell.
 Mary Blane.
 New Darkey Medley.
 Oh! Silber Shining Moon.
 Oh, Lud Gals.
 Oh, Susannah.
 Parody on the Lady of Lyons.
 Pirate's Chorus.
 Ride on, Darkies.
 Rosa Lee.
 Sally Weaver.
 See! Sir, See!
 Somebody's in de House wid Sussey.
 Swash Shaw, Hands Across.
 Sweep oh! Sweep oh!
 The Celebrated Black Shaker Song.
 The Merry Sleigh Bells.
 The Little Nigger Sweep.
 The Possum's Retreat.
 Tread Lightly.
 Uncle Ned.
 Way Down on the Old Pee Dee.
 Whar is de Spot.
 Yes, 'Tis True, Thy Katy Now is Sleeping.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, on receipt of ten cents.

HARRISON'S COMIC SONGSTER.

CONTENTS :

Bachelor Management.
 Courting Two Sweethearts at Once.
 Did You Ever?
 Doctor Brown.
 Hymen's Court.
 If it Wasn't for Rain.
 If You Think You've Many Friends.
 I'm a Constable.
 I'm a 'Prentice Boy.
 Joys of Winter.
 Mankind are all Birds.
 Miseries of an Omnibus.
 One Suit Between Two.

Provided You've Mouey to Pay for it.
 Raspberry Wine.
 Rural Felicity.
 Steamboat Excursion.
 The Boarding-house Keeper's Keeper's Miseries.
 The Doctor's Boy.
 The Lazy Family.
 The Little Man.
 The Model Artist.
 The Very Singular Man.
 Very Polite of Her.
 Whiskers.

Copies mailed to any address in the United States, free of postage, upon receipt of ten cents.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

The Sociable; or, One Thousand and One Home Amusements. Containing Acting Proverbs, Dramatic Charades, Acting Charades, Tableaux Vivants, Parlor Games, and Parlor Magic, and a choice collection of Puzzles, &c., illustrated with nearly 300 Engravings and Diagrams, the whole being a fund of never-ending entertainment. By the Author of the "Magician's Own Book." Nearly 400 pages, 12mo., cloth, gilt side stamp..... Price $1.25.

Inquire Within for Anything You Want to Know; or, Over 3,700 Facts for the People. Illustrated, 436 large pages.... Price $1.25.

"Inquire Within" is one of the most valuable and extraordinary volumes ever presented to the American public, and embodies nearly 4,000 facts, in most of which any person living will find instruction, aid, and entertainment. It contains so many valuable and useful recipes, that an enumeration of them requires seventy-two columns of fine type for the Index.

The Corner Cupboard; or, Facts for Everybody. By the Author of "Inquire Within," "The Reason Why," &c. Large 12mo., 400 pages, cloth, gilt side and back. Illustrated with over 1000 Engravings. Price $1.25.

The Reason Why: General Science. A careful collection of some thousands of reasons for things, which, though generally known, are imperfectly understood. By the Author of "Inquire Within." A handsome 12mo. volume of 356 pages, cloth, gilt, and embellished with a large number of wood-cuts..... Price $1.25.

The Biblical Reason Why: A Hand-Book for Biblical Students, and a Guide to Family Scripture Readings. By the Author of "Inquire Within," &c. Beautifully illustrated, large 12mo. cloth, gilt side and back..... Price $1.25.

The Reason Why: Natural History. By the Author of "Inquire Within," "The Biblical Reason Why," &c. 12mo. cloth, gilt side and back. Giving Reasons for hundreds of interesting facts in Natural History..... Price $1.25.

10,000 Wonderful Things. Comprising the Marvellous and Rare, Odd, Curious, Quaint, Eccentric, and Extraordinary, in all Ages and Nations, in Art, Nature, and Science, including many Wonders of the world, enriched with Hundreds of Authentic Illustrations. 12mo. cloth, gilt side and back..... Price $1.25.

That's It; or, Plain Teaching. By the Author of "Inquire Within," "The Reason Why," &c. Illustrated with over 1,200 Wood-cuts. 12mo., cloth, gilt side and back..... Price $1.25.

The Lady's Manual of Fancy Work. A Complete Instructor in every variety of Ornamental Needle-Work; including Shading and Coloring, Printer's Marks, Explanatory Terms, &c., &c. The Whole being a Complete Lexicon of Fancy Work. By Mrs. PULLAX, Director of the Work-table of Frank Leslie's Magazine, &c., &c. Illustrated with over 300 Engravings, by the best Artists, with eight large pattern plates, elegantly printed in colors on tinted paper. Large 8vo., beautifully bound in fine cloth, with gilt side and back stamp.

Price $1.25.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

The Secret Out: or, One Thousand Tricks with Cards and other Recreations. Illustrated with over Three Hundred Engravings. A book which explains all the Tricks and Deceptions with Playing Cards ever known or invented, and gives, besides, a great many new and interesting ones—the whole being described so accurately and carefully, with engravings to illustrate them, that anybody can easily learn how to practice these Tricks. This work also contains 210 of the best Tricks in Legerdemain, in addition to the card tricks. 12mo, 400 pages, bound in cloth, with gilt side and back.....Price $1.25.

The Art of Dancing. Containing the Figures, Music, and necessary instruction for all Modern Approved Dances. Also, Hints on Etiquette and the Ethics of Politeness. By EDWARD FERRERO, Professor of Dancing, &c. A large bound book, full of Engravings and Music to illustrate it.....Price $1.25.

The Dictionary of Love. Containing a Definition of all the terms used in Courtship, with rare quotations from Poets of all Nations, together with specimens of curious Model Love Letters, and many other interesting matters appertaining to Love, never before published. 12mo, cloth, gilt side and back.....Price $1.25.

The Magician's Own Book. Being a Hand-Book of Parlor Magic, and containing several hundred amusing Magical, Magnetical, Electrical, and Chemical Experiments, Astonishing Transmutations, Wonderful Sleight-of-Hand and Card Tricks, Curious and Perplexing Puzzles, Quaint Questions in Numbers, &c., together with all the most noted Tricks of Modern Performers. Illustrated with over 500 Wood Engravings. 12mo, cloth, gilt side and back stamp, 400 pages.
Price $1.25.

The Book of 1,000 Tales and Amusing Adventures. Containing over 300 Engravings, and 450 pages. This is a magnificent book, and is crammed full of narratives and adventures.....Price $1.00.

The Bordeaux Wine and Liquor Dealer's Guide; or, How to Manufacture and Adulterate Liquors. By a practical Liquor Manufacturer. 12mo, cloth.....Price $2.00.

In this work, not one article in the smallest degree approximating to a poison is recommended, and yet the book teaches how Cognac Brandy, Scotch and Irish Whiskey, Foreign and Domestic Rum, all kinds of Wines, Cordials, &c., from the choicest to the commonest, can be imitated to that perfection that the best judges cannot detect the method of manufacture, even by chemical tests of the severest character.

Ladies' Guide to Crochet. By Mrs. ANN S. STEPHENS. Copiously illustrated with original and very choice designs in Crochet, &c., printed in colors, separate from the letter press, on tinted paper. Also with numerous wood-cuts, printed with the letter press, explanatory of terms, etc. Oblong, pp 117, beautifully bound in extra cloth, gilt. This is by far the best work on the subject of Crochet ever published.
Price $1.00

Arts of Beauty; or, Secrets of a Lady's Toilet. With Hints to Gentlemen on the Art of Fascinating. By Madame LOLA MONTEZ, Countess of Landsfeldt. Cloth, gilt side. This book contains an account, in detail, of all the arts employed by the fashionable ladies of all the chief cities of Europe, for the purpose of developing and preserving their charms Price 50 cts.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

Live and Learn : A Guide for all those who wish to speak and write correctly; particularly intended as a Book of Reference for the solution of difficulties connected with Grammar, Composition, Punctuation, &c., &c., containing examples of one thousand mistakes of daily occurrence, in speaking, writing, and pronunciation. 216 pages, cloth, 12mo. Price 63 cts.

The Harp of a Thousand Strings; or, Laughter for a Lifetime. A large book of nearly 400 pages. By the Author of Mrs. Partington's Carpet-Bag of Fun. Bound in a handsome gilt cover. Containing more than a million laughs, and crowded full of Funny Stories, besides being illustrated with over Two Hundred Comical Engravings, by Darley, McLennan, Bellew, &c. Price $1.25.

The Book of 1.000 Comical Stories; or, Endless Repast of Fun. Appropriately illustrated with 300 Comic Engravings. By the Author of "Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun." Large 12mo. cloth. Price $1.00.

The Perfect Gentleman; or, Etiquette and Eloquence. A Book of Information and Instruction for those who desire to become brilliant and conspicuous in General Society; or at Parties, Dinners, or Popular Gatherings. Containing Model Speeches for all Occasions, with Directions how to deliver them; 500 Toasts and Sentiments for everybody, and their proper mode of introduction; How to use Wine at Table; with Rules for judging the quality of Wine, and Rules for Carving; Etiquette, or proper Behavior in Company, with an American Code of Politeness for every Occasion; Etiquette at Washing'on, Remarkable Wit and Conversation at Table, &c., &c. To which is added, The Duties of a Chairman of a Public Meeting, with Rules for the Orderly Conduct thereof; together with Valuable Hints and Examples for Drawing up Preambles and Resolutions, and a great deal of instructive and amusing matter never before published. 12mo. cloth, nearly 400 pages. Price $1.25.

Songs of Ireland: Embracing Songs of the Affections, Convivial and Comic Songs, Patriotic and Military Songs; Historical and Political Songs; Moral, Sentimental, Satirical, and Miscellaneous Songs. Edited and Annotated by SAMUEL LOVER, Author of "Handy Andy," "Rory O More," "Legends and Stories of Ireland," &c. Embellished with numerous fine Illustrations, engraved by the celebrated Dalziel. 12mo. cloth, gilt side and back. Price $1.25.

Narratives and Adventures of Travelers in Africa. By Charles Williams, Esq. 12mo. cloth, gilt back. Profusely illustrated with Engravings. Price $1.00.

The Lady's Own Pattern Book; or, Treasures in Needlework. Comprising instructions in Knitting, Netting, Crochet, Point Lace, Tatting, Braiding, Embroidery, &c. Illustrated with over Five Hundred Useful and Ornamental Designs, Patterns, &c. By Mrs. PULLAN and Mrs. WARREN. Large 12mo. gilt side and back. This work, which is superbly gotten up, so as to fit it for holiday souvenirs, contains over Five Hundred Engravings, Pattern Plates, &c., and besides, embraces minute instructions for the execution of every known species of needle-work. No family should be without it. Price $1.25.

Anecdotes of Love. Being a true account of the most remarkable events connected with the History of Love in all Ages and among all Nations. By LOLA MONTEZ, Countess of Landsfeldt. Large 12mo, cloth. Price $1.25.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

The Book of 500 Curious Puzzles. Containing a large collection of Entertaining Paradoxes, Perplexing Deceptions in Numbers and Amusing Tricks in Geometry. By the author of "The Sociable." Illustrated with a great variety of engravings. 12mo, fancy paper coverPrice 25 cts.

The Book of Fireside Games: A Repertory of Social Amusements. Containing an Explanation of the most Entertaining Games, suited to the Family Circle as a Recreation. By the Author of "The Sociable," "The Secret Out," &c., &c. Illustrated, 12mo, fancy paper cover.....Price 25 cts.

The American Home Cook-Book. Containing several hundred excellent Recipes. The whole based on many years' experience of an American Housewife. Illustrated with Engravings. All the Recipes in this Book are written from actual experiments in Cooking. There are no copyings from theoretical cooking recipes. It is a book of 128 pages, and is very cheap.....Price 25 cts.

Dr. Valentine's Comic Lectures. A budget of Wit and Humor; or, Morsels of Mirth for the Melancholy. A certain cure for the blues, and all other serious complaints. Comprising Comic Lectures on Heads, Faces, Noses, Mouths, Animal Magnetism, etc., with Specimens of Eloquence, Transactions of Learned Societies, Delineations of Eccentric Characters, Comic Songs, etc., etc. By Dr. W. VALENTINE, the favorite delineator of Eccentric Characters. Illustrated with twelve portraits of Dr. Valentine, in his most celebrated characters. 12mo, cloth, gilt.....Price 75 cts.
Ornamental paper cover.....Price 50 cts.

Dr. Valentine's Comic Metamorphoses. Being the second series of Dr. Valentine's Lectures, with characters as given by the late Yankee Hill. Embellished with numerous portraits. Ornamental paper coverPrice 50 cts.
Cloth, gilt.....Price 75 cts.

The Book of 1,000 Comical Stories; or, Endless Repast of Fun. A rich banquet for every day in the year, with several courses and a dessert. BILL OF FARE: Comprising Tales of Humor, Laughable Anecdotes, Irresistible Drolleries, Jovial Jokes, Comical Conceits, Puns and Pickings, Quibbles and Queries, Bon Mots and Broadgrins, Oddities, Epigrams, &c., &c. Appropriately Illustrated with 300 Comic Engravings. By the author of "Mrs. Partington's Carpet-Bag of Fun." Large 12mo, cloth.....Price $1.00.

The Courtship and Adventures of Jonathan Homebred; or, the Scrapes and Escapes of a Live Yankee. Beautifully Illustrated. 12mo, cloth. The book is printed in handsome style, on good paper, and with amusing engravings.....Price $1.00.

Etiquette and the Usages of Society. Containing the most Approved Rules for Correct Conduct in Social and Fashionable Life—with Hints to both Gentlemen and Ladies on Awkward and Vulgar Habits. Also, the Etiquette of Love and Courtship, Marriage Etiquette, &c., &c. By H. P. WILLIS. A book of 64 pages.....Price 10 cts.
Bound in cloth with gilt side, and printed on fine paper, suitable for a present to a lady.....Price 25 cts.

The Chairman and Speaker's Guide; or, Rules for the Orderly Conduct of Public Meetings......Price 12 cts.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

Pettengill's Perfect Fortune-Teller and Dream-Book: or, The Art of Discerning Future Events, as practiced by Modern Seers and Astrologers—being also a Key to the Hidden Mysteries of the Middle Ages. To which is added Curious and Amusing Charms, Invocations, Signs, &c., &c. B. PELETIAH PETTENGILL, Philom. A book of 144 pages, bound in boards, with cloth back Price 30 cts.

Courtship Made Easy; or, The Art of Making Love fully Explained. Containing full and minute directions for conducting a Courtship with Ladies of every age and position in society, and valuable information for persons who desire to enter the marriage state. Also, Forms of Love Letters to be used on certain occasions. 64 pp. Price 12 cts.

Chesterfield's Art of Letter-writing Simplified. A Guide to Friendly, Affectionate, Polite, and Business Correspondence. Price 12 cts.

Containing a large collection of the most valuable information relative to the Art of Letter-Writing, with clear and complete instructions how to begin and end correspondence, Rules for Punctuation and Spelling, &c., together with numerous examples of Letters and Notes on every subject of Epistolary Interchange, with several important Hints on Love Letters.

Knowlson's Farrier, and Complete Horse Doctor. We have printed a new and revised edition of this celebrated book, which contains Knowlson's famous Recipe for the cure of Spavin, and other new matter. It is positively the best book of the kind ever written. We sell it cheap because of the immense demand for it. The farmers and horse-keepers like it because it gives them plain common-sense directions how to manage their horses. We sell our new edition (64 pages, 18mo,) cheap Price 12 cts.

The Art of Conversation: With Remarks on Fashion and Address. By MRS. MABERLY. This is the best book on the subject ever published. It contains nothing that is verbose or difficult to understand, but all the instructions and rules for conversation are given in a plain and common-sense manner, so that any one, however dull, can easily comprehend them. 64 pages octavo, large. Price 25 cts.

Horse-Taming by a New Method, as Practiced by J. S. Rarey. A New and Improved Edition, containing Mr. Rarey's whole Secret of Subduing and Breaking Vicious Horses, together with his Improved Plan of Managing Young Colts, and Breaking them to the Saddle, the Harness, and the Sulkey—with ten engravings illustrating the process. Every person who keeps a horse should buy this book. It costs but a trifle, and you will positively find it an excellent guide in the management of that noble animal. This is a very handsome book of 64 pages Price 12 cts.

The Game of Whist: Rules, Directions and Maxims to be observed in playing it. Containing also Primary Rules for Beginners, Explanations and Directions for Old Players, and the Laws of the Game. Compiled from Hoyle and Matthews. Also, Loo, Euchre, and Poker, as now generally played—with an explanation of Marked Cards, &c., &c. Price 12 cts.

The Young Bride's Book: An Epitome of the Social and Domestic Duties of Woman, as the Wife and the Mother. By ARTHUR FREEING. This is one of the best and most useful books ever issued in the cheap form. It is printed in clear and beautiful type, and on fine paper. Price 12 cts.

Send cash orders to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann St., N. Y.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the prices annexed.

The Ladies' Love Oracle; or, Counsellor to the Fair Sex. Being a complete Fortune Teller and Interpreter to all questions upon the different events and situations of life, but more especially relating to all circumstances connected with Love, Courtship, and Marriage. By MADAME LE MARCHAND. Beautifully illustrated cover, printed in colors.....Price 25 cts.

The Laws of Love. A complete Code of Gallantry.
12 mo. PaperPrice 25 cts.

Containing concise rules for the conduct of Courtship through its entire progress, aphorisms of love, rules for telling the characters and dispositions of women, remedies for love, and an Epistolary Code.

Gamblers' Tricks with Cards Exposed and Explained. By J. H. GREEN, Reformed Gambler. 12mo, paper.....Price 25 cts.

This work contains one hundred tricks with cards, explained, and shows the numerous cheats which Gamblers practice upon their unwary dupes.

How to Win and How to Woo. Containing Rules for the Etiquette of Courtship, with directions showing how to win the favor of Ladies, how to begin and end a Courtship, and how Love Letters should be written.....Price 12 cts.

Bridal Etiquette. A Sensible Guide to the Etiquette and Observances of the Marriage Ceremonies; containing complete directions for Bridal Receptions, and the necessary rules for bridesmaids, groomsmen sending cards, &c., &c.....Price 12 cts.

How to Behave; or, The Spirit of Etiquette. A Complete Guide to Polite Society, for Ladies and Gentlemen; containing rules for good behavior at the dinner table, in the parlor, and in the street; with important hints on introduction, conversation, &c....Price 12 cts.

The Everlasting Fortune-Teller and Magnetic Dream-Book. Containing the science of foretelling events by the Signs of the Zodiac, Lists of Lucky and Unlucky Days, with Presages drawn therefrom; the science of Foretelling Events by cards, dice, &c...Price 25 cts.

Morgan's Free-Masonry Exposed and Explained. Showing the Origin, History, and Nature of Masonry; its Effects on the Government and the Christian Religion; and containing a Key to all the Degrees of Free-Masonry; giving a clear and correct view of the manner of Conferring the Different Degrees, as practiced in all Lodges throughout the GlobePrice 25 cts.

How to Dress with Taste; Containing hints on the harmony of colors, the theory of contrast, the complexion, shape or light, Price 12 cts.

Mind Your Stops: Punctuation made plain, and Composition simplified for Readers, Writers and Talkers.....Price 12 cts.

This little book is worth ten times the price asked for it, and will teach accurately in everything, from the diction of a friendly letter to the composition of a learned treatise.

Hard Words Made Easy; Rules for Pronunciation and Accent; with instructions how to pronounce French, Italian, German, Russian, Danish, Dutch, Swedish, Norwegian, and other foreign names. A capital workPrice 12 cts.

Popular Books sent Free of Postage at the Prices annexed.

Fontaine's Golden Wheel Dream-Book and Fortune-Teller. By FELIX FONTAINE, Fortune-Teller and Astrologer. Being the most complete book on Fortune-Telling and Interpreting Dreams ever printed. Each Dream has the lucky number which the Dream signifies attached to it, and those who wish to purchase Lottery Tickets will do well to consult them. This book also informs you how to TELL FORTUNES with the Golden Wheel, with Cards, Dice, and Dominoes; how to tell future events by Psalmistry on the lines of the hands, by moles on the body, by the face, nails, and shape of the head; how to find where to dig for water, coal, and all kinds of metals, with the celebrated Divining Rod; Charms to make your Sweetheart love you, to make your Lover pop the question; together with Twenty Ways of Telling Fortunes on New Year's Eve.

book contains 144 pages, and is bound in pasteboard sides with cloth back. It is illustrated with numerous Engravings, showing how to hold the Divining Rod, how to lay out Cards when you Tell Fortunes, how to tell the names of your intended Wife or Husband by the charm of the Key and Book, etc. This book also contains a large Colored Lithographic Engraving of the Golden Wheel, which folds up. It is the cheapest on our list.....

Price 30 cts.

Chesterfield's Letter-Writer and Complete Book of Etiquette; or, Concise Systematic Directions for Arranging and Writing Letters. Also, Model Correspondence in Friendship and Business, and a great variety of Model Love Letters. If any lady or gentleman desires to know how to begin a Love Correspondence, this is just the book they want. If they wish to speak their minds to a tardy, a bashful, or a careless or indifferent lover, or sweetheart, this book tells exactly how it should be done. This work is also a Complete Book of Etiquette. You will find more real information in this book than in half-a-dozen volumes of the more expensive ones. It is emphatically a book for the million, and one which every young person should have. As it contains Etiquette for Ladies, as well as for Gentlemen—Etiquette of Courtship and Marriage—Etiquette for writing Love Letters, and all that sort of thing, it is an appropriate book to present to a lady. This book contains 136 pages, and is bound in pasteboard sides, with cloth back.....

Price 30 cts.

Le Marchand's Fortune-Teller and Dream-Book. A complete interpretation to all questions upon the different events and situations of life; but more especially relating to Love, Courtship and Marriage. Containing the significations of all the various Dreams, together with numerous other methods of foretelling future events. By MADAM LE MARCHAND, the celebrated Parisian Fortune-Teller.....

Price 30 cts.

100 Tricks With Cards. J. H. Green, the Reformed Gambler, has just authorized the publication of a new edition of his book entitled, "Gamblers' Tricks with Cards Exposed and Explained." This is a book of 93 pages, and it exposes and explains all the mysteries of the Gambling Tables. It is interesting not only to those who play, but to those who do not. Old Players will get some new ideas from this curious book.....

Price 25 cts.

Laughing Gas. An Encyclopædia of Wit, Wisdom, and Wind. By SAM SLICK, Jr. Comically illustrated with 100 original and laughable Engravings, and nearly 500 side-extending Jokes, and other things to get fat on; and the best of it is, that every thing about the book is new and fresh—all new—new designs, new stories, new type—no comic almanac stuff. It will be found a complete antidote to "hard times".....

Price 25 cts.

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FAC

AA 001 188 401 2

